DUTCH SMASH AT JAPS IN INDIES

Asks Council to Give Airport $5,000

HARRINGTON FILES PLEA FOR RUNWAYS

Says Fund Also Needed For Improvement of Port's Drainage System.

CITES BAD CONDITION

Request Points Out Role of Airfield In National Defense Program.

City council, scheduled to meet tonight to put its stamp of approval on the 1942 appropriation bill, will be confronted with an 11th-hour appeal for funds for the improvement and maintenance of municipal airport.

Filed with council today, the request was submitted by James R. Harrington, airport manager, who seeks $5,000 for improving the runways and drainage system at the port.

The communication went to council at almost the same time plans were completed for stepping up operations at the field with the organization of a Civil Air Patrol, to guard the civilian front of 10 north central Ohio counties.

More than 100 planes and upwards to 1,000 persons are expected to use the port as a base of operations in connection with the newly organized air arm of the Civilian Defense program.

"This request is no different than that annually in every community of importance in the country and should not conflict with our present city interest in connection with acquiring hard surfaced runways," Harrington wrote.

"In order to go on with the program that our nation requires and in order for the city of Mansfield to continue to keep its place in the aviation picture of this country, it is absolutely essential that the present airport be under constant development and that every effort be made to maintain it as a safe and proper operating field."

Asserting that the field is in "deplorable condition," he reminded council that lack of

Enlistees, Officers Launch Organization Of Civil Air Patrol

More than 200 persons were enlisted last night during organization of Mansfield's Civil Air patrol. Upper left shows a group obtaining application forms. They are, from left to right, Don McCutchen, 115 Penn avenue, a private pilot, and W. H. Rush, 585 Highland avenue. Ralph Baehr, of Bucyrus student pilot, is in the background. Melvin Marvicson, Mansfield R. D. 1,a student pilot, James R. Harrington, Fifth group commander, and Howard O'Dell. At the right Harrington and O'Dell discuss the medical setup with Dr. M. S. Shilling of Ashland, medical examiner for the Civil Aeronautics Authority in this district. Below, Patrolman Paul J. Martin of the Mansfield police department fingerprinting Rowland Poth, 118 Columbia avenue, a private pilot while Battey Mae Thompson, looks on. McCutchon wipes his hands. The fingerprints as well as photographs of the applicant must accompany the enlistment papers.

GET SET FOR REGISTRATION

Draft Boards Prepare Plans For Enrolling of Men Between 20-44.

Richland county draft boards today prepared to set up machinery for registering several thousand more men from 20 to 44 on Feb. 16 and possibly some of them during the week-end of Feb. 14-15.

The boards' biggest problem will be to avoid congestion and waiting in line on registration day which falls on Monday.

Although definite plans have not been worked out, board clerks said registration booths probably will be set up throughout the city and in Shelby and county villages. The boards will choose workers to have charge of the booths.

Boards said they had not yet formally received an announcement by Col. W. G. Goble, state director, that some men may be registered Feb. 14 and 15 if those days will be more convenient than Feb. 16, the day set by President Roosevelt for registering men between the ages of 20 and 44 who have not already signed up for possible military service.

Clerks said school buildings have been suggested as registration places for Feb. 16, but they were doubtful about using them all three days.

A number of persons who assisted the county election board with the first registration in October, 1940, have already volunteered to serve again next month, clerks said.

Meanwhile, Col. Goble, head of the state draft organization, today urged boards not to become "hysterical" about the increased need for men and begin re-classifying registrants to place all able-bodied men in class 1-A.

"Regardless of statements to the contrary, all rules and regulations regarding deferments in class 2-A and 2-B are in full effect and will remain in effect until nullified by specific orders from the director of selective service," Col. Goble said.

He pointed out that he will carefully scrutinize all current re-classifications of registrants having occupational deferments and will take such action as is necessary to make certain that men needed in war industries will not be ordered into the army.

200 Volunteer As Nucleus Of Mansfield's Civil Air Patrol

More than 200 persons, men and women from all ranks of life, formed the nucleus today of Mansfield's Civil Air patrol, the air arm of north central Ohio's Civilian Defense program comprising parts of 10 counties.

Doctors, lawyers, merchants, mechanics, clerks and stenographers—they pledged themselves to assist in the preservation of American democracy by submitting their applications for enlistment "for the duration."

Meeting at the American Legion home last night the volunteers represented air enthusiasts from a score of cities and villages in the Fifth group area which includes the territory bounded roughly by Sandusky, Lorain, Marion and Wooster.

With one-third of the 102 licensed aircraft in the area owned by Mansfield fliers, municipal airport will be the base of operations.

The patrol, expected to play a vital role in the home defense program, is designed to relieve army

RATIONING

Will Follow Diversion of Food, Says Landis.

BOSTON—(INS)—Warning that the United States faced food rationing was left today by Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard law school on the eve of his departure for Washington to assume his duties as executive director of the office of civilian defense.

"It won't be long before the normal foods we have been getting will not be here," Dean Landis told a gathering of the New England division of the American Jewish conference.

"Tire rationing is one more move down the field to where everything will have to be subordinated to the effort to win this war. We may be faced soon with diversion of some of our normal food stuffs to other channels."

LOCKE RENAMES ALL HIS AIDES

Announces Appointments as Council Studies City Appropriation Bill.

While Mansfield's city council considered the passage of a $304,353 appropriations ordinance for the coming year, and Republican members were seeking means to overthrow the Democratic minority's control of its most important committees, Mayor W. J. Locke broke a long silence today to announce reappointment of his department heads for his second term.

Council will meet at 8 p. m. today in the municipal building to act on the city's appropriations bill for 1942. At the same time, it is expected that Republican members will attempt to have "something done" about Democratic President of Council H. G. Miller's committee appointments.

Locke's reappointments return Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton and six other city employes to their posts for another two years

Also appointed were C. H. Hebel, streets superintendent; O. C. Kalbfleisch, waterworks superintendent; James R. Turner, superintendent of the sewage disposal plant; L. L. Linham, garbage superintendent; Gladys Lash, secretary to the mayor and service director; and Betty Mae Thompson, telephone operator.

Miller last week gave control of the important finance, water and lights committees to council's only two Democrats.

Republican members and Mayor Locke feel that the Republicans, by virtue of their 7-2 majority in council, should control these committees. Although they will not admit any definite plan of action has been mapped, some Republican councilmen have indicated

WINTER BEHAVES

Temperatures Move Back To Normal as Cold Breaks.

Winter was behaving more like a lady today as temperatures moved back to normal for the first time in eight days.

Although a blizzard threatened to block highways for a time this morning, skies cleared before noon and the mercury went up to 30 degrees, only two below freezing. Lowest reading this morning was 16 degrees. Temperatures Sunday ranged from six to 25 degrees above zero.

Fair and not quite so cold was the prediction for tonight. Strong winds were expected to diminish.

About a half-inch of snow fell this morning from 8 to 10 o'clock. Driven by a strong wind, it threatened to drift across roads and streets. There was not enough, however, to bring the county's snow-fighting equipment into action.

WINSTED, Conn. —(AP)— Tire rationing isn't going to bother Anthony Bernardo as long as subfreezing temperatures prevail.

He took four cast-off tires, stuffed them with sawdust, wired them to the rims of his car and, through a slit, soaked them with water. It was 20 below zero at the time and now he has solid tires.

"They're a little bumpy," he said, "but so are the roads."

FDR MOVES TO SELL HIS PRICE CONTROL IDEAS

OPPOSES WICKARD POWER

Confers With Leaders Today; Senate-House Conferees Seek Compromise.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt confers with his congressional leaders today about congress' refusal to follow his advice on wartime price control legislation.

Administration senate leaders have described the bill passed by the senate late Saturday as "farm relief" legislation rather than price control.

One of the senate bill's provisions—give Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard veto power over any farm price ceilings fixed by Price Administrator Leon Henderson — was approved, over the express opposition of the president, who had asked in a letter to Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky that there be no division of authority.

Wickard, in an interview today, said he still wanted control of prices as well as production of farm products, contending that they should be administered jointly to assure the allied nations adequate food supplies.

The legislative problem on price control legislation is a knotty one. The senate and house versions differ radically on important provisions. Senate-house conferees are expected to begin work tomorrow or Wednesday in an effort to reach a compromise.

The senate passed its version of the measure late Saturday, 83 to 1, with only Sen. Gerald P. Nye, R., N. D., dissenting, after the strong farm bloc limited the government's power to regulate the prices of agricultural commodities.

Both senate and house bills are alike in these respects:

1. Both confer price fixing authority to an administrator, and advise him to try to keep price relationships generally in line with those prevailing from Oct. 1 to 15, 1941.

2. Both exclude wages from his price fixing authority.

3. Both carry authority to put ceilings on rents in defense areas.

They differ in these important respects:

1. The house bill prohibits the fixing of any farm price ceiling below the highest of the following: (A) 110 per cent of parity; (B) the market price of Oct. 1; or (C) the average market price for the period from July 1, 1919 to June 30, 1929. The senate bill prohibits the fixing of any farm price ceiling below: (A) a special

Gassed, Two Men Drag Each Other Out of Garage

Dragging themselves in search of help, between moments of collapse after being overcome by carbon monoxide fumes, two Mansfield area men had a close brush with death yesterday afternoon.

Wade A. Wise of Seminole avenue and V. C. Stevens, Mansfield, R D 3, were the two men who escaped death.

Wise was helping Stevens repair the generator of his car in a garage near the Stevens home. Testing the generator, the men left the motor running "not more than ten minutes" and then switched it off.

Carbon monoxide fumes had stored up within the garage walls and overpowered Stevens.

Wise was also in distress but managed to drag Stevens to the door of the garage before collapsing himself. There in the open air, Stevens was the first to recover and helped Wise to crawl and stagger to the Stevens home.

Wise collapsed a second time upon reaching the house and Mrs. Stevens called the Mansfield fire department and the Jones Memorial home to rush inhalators to the home. An inhalator was needed to revive Wise but Stevens recovered without aid.

Both men were still convalescing today but suffered nothing more than "spitting headaches."

Allied Planes Strike Back At Enemy Shipping

Heavy Battle Rages On Entire Front In Philippine Islands

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A heavy artillery battle along the entire front in the Philippines was reported today by the war department, with ground activity increasing as fresh Japanese troops moved up, accompanied by renewed air attacks on American and Philippine defense.

Corregidor, the island fortress guarding the entrance of Manila bay, as well as front line defenses of General Douglas MacArthur's troops, were subjected to new assaults from the air, the department said, as fresh enemy troops increased the pressure on the defending forces.

The text of the morning communique, number 55, based on reports received here up to 9:30 a. m. E.S.T.

"Philippine theater:

"A heavy artillery battle is in progress along the entire front. Ground activity is increasing as fresh Japanese troops move into front line position. Enemy air attacks are being renewed on defensive installations and fortifications.

"General MacArthur reports that Japanese troops occupying Manila are attempting to suppress the use of radio receiving sets by civilians. This apparently is designed to prevent the reception of broadcasts from the United States and England, even though the action also prevents reception of propaganda broadcasts from Tokyo.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Flying Yanks and flying Dutchmen teamed up today to hunt more Japanese ships for their hit parade.

The targets they sought represented the vulnerable spot in Nippon's grandoise campaign of conquest, the huge quantities of troops and supplies which Tokyo needs in the south Pacific.

The U. S. army and Netherlands bombers got in some heavy blows yesterday, as the Japs battled to establish a major new invasion front in the fabulously rich East Indies.

The Yanks paid a return visit

Defenders Keep Up Stiff Resistance At Two Vital Oil Areas

(By United Press)

BATAVIA, N. E. I.—(UP)—Allied armed forces, including American built bombers, struck heavy counter-blows against Japanese invaders of the East Indies today, bombing a Japanese cruiser and two enemy transports and shooting down four enemy planes over Celebes.

A Japanese destroyer also was attacked.

The new counter-blows brought the total of enemy transports hit to six, including two torpedoed and sunk by Dutch submarines in the Gulf of Siam. Three Japanese warships have been attacked since the invasion of Celebes and oil-rich Tarakan island began and two cruisers were reported hit.

The latest attacks were described in a communique that emphasized that "our Allies are energetically taking part in the fight against the invaders." Both American and Australian airplanes were mentioned in the counter-attacks.

Bitter fighting was reported in progress against the Japanese sea-borne and parachute troops landed on the Dutch islands in an effort to seize the rich oil area of Tarakan and Bali Papan, in East Borneo.

Darned Amusing, These Japanese

When fancier stories are told, Japanese propagandists will tell them.

Yesterday, the Japanese-controlled radio at Saigon, Indo-China, credited the Japanese with sinking the British cruiser Galatea.

Actually, the British announced it Saturday afternoon, as having occurred in the Mediterranean—thousands of miles from any Japanese enemy. On Sunday, The News-Journal carried an eye-witness account of the sinking, written by Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent, who was aboard the ship and narrowly escaped with his life.

EXPLAINS: Knox Answers Big Question---Where Is U. S. Fleet?

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Navy Knox today told the nation not to expect full scale naval engagements in the Pacific in the near future because United States fleet units are now busy guarding strategic points and convoying supplies to insure defeat of world enemy No. 1.—Nazi Germany.

Speaking before the United States conference of mayors in the nation's capital, Knox gave the first explanation since the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor to the question uppermost in the minds of Americans: "Where is the United States fleet?"

"I would not be frank with you if I led you to believe to expect favorable, dramatic developments of triumphant American, full scale naval engagements in the Pacific in the near future," Knox declared.

"The elements of distance, of time, of the necessarily wide distribution of our naval forces preclude what I know you all wish me to suggest: early, conclusive showdown with the Japanese navy. But you know that by this I do not mean to imply that the Pacific fleet is idle. It is not idle and you will hear from it again and again: when and where care-

OVERTURES: U. S., Britain Try Anew For Bases In Eire

(By Associated Press)

Reports of a renewed American-British diplomatic effort to win war bases in neutral Eire shared importance today with advices that Russian armies had breached a new German winter defense line on the central front, putting themselves in good position to close their pincers on perhaps 150,000 Germans in the Mozhaisk sector.

The envisioned effects of air and sea bases in Eire were far-reaching, but most immediate of all was their potential effect on Germany's already dwindling battle of the Atlantic sealanes.

That Germany still holds a great striking power in the Atlantic despite the curtailing effects of United States naval participation in patrolling and convoy protection was emphasized by a German communique announcing that another British destroyer had been sunk in the Atlantic by submarine action.

The Hitler command said that still another was torpedoed in the Mediterranean, presumably only damaged.

New overtures to Eire, combined with a British press campaign, have been mainly informal but nonetheless official thus far, it was reliably reported in London. The chances of success have improved since the United States entered the war.

Eire's prime minister, Eamon de Valera, has said that Irish sympathies lie with the United

NOT EXPECTED

Lindbergh Not Due at White House, Early Says.

WASHINGTON— (INS) —Charles A. Lindbergh has no engagement at the White House, and he has requested none, Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said today.

Early's statement came in response to inquiries about a Boston dispatch which said the trans-Atlantic flyer had told a friend his sole purpose in coming to Washington was to visit President Roosevelt.

Lindbergh recently offered his services anew to the army air corps and arrived in Washington last week, presumably to discuss his future status with officials of the war department.

Newsboys Will Form City's Biggest Defense Stamp Sales Organization

More than 200 News-Journal carriers will soon become the largest defense stamp sales organization in Mansfield, serving as volunteer agents of Uncle Sam in an "all-out" campaign to sell stamps to help finance the war for democracy.

Within a few days each News-Journal carrier boy will take a supply of defense savings stamps with him on his route. To identify him as an official stamp salesman he will wear a big red, white, and blue badge designating him as a "Defense Agent for Defense Stamp Sales."

The carrier will collect the money for the stamps he sells the customers on his route and turn the receipts over to Uncle Sam.

The boys will receive nothing for selling stamps except the satisfaction of knowing that they are serving their country at a time when everyone's help is needed.

A full-page advertisement in this issue of The News-Journal tells about the carrier campaign to sell stamps. Detailed announcements about when the drive will start and just how you can buy stamps from your carrier boy will be made in future issues of The News-Journal.

A number of News-Journal carrier boys have already set a good example by investing their savings in stamps and bonds, some of them buying as much as $150 worth of them.

The carrier boy campaign will go hand-in-hand with a county-wide drive which will get under way soon under the direction of Paul M. Eliot, Mansfield, as general chairman.

DUTCH SMASH AT JAP FORCES IN EAST INDIES

mittedly was serious although bitter resistance was in progress. Out of the Dutch oil production which in 1938 totalled 8,300,000 tons, Tarakan provided 750,000 tons of such high quality that it could be pumped directly into ships. The present output there was estimated at 80,000 tons a month.

Sumatra is the biggest producer with 4,600,000 tons in 1938 and Java next with about 1,000,000 tons.

The communique said 30 wounded persons had been landed at Bali Papan, in Dutch East Borneo, from a ship which the Japanese had bombed and machine gunned.

The new Japanese drive was a triple-threat aimed at capturing immensely rich oil fields, encircling Singapore and cutting American south seas communications.

Dutch bombing planes scored direct hits on two Japanese transports, probably damaged a cruiser with a near miss and downed three Japanese seaplanes, while a Dutch submarine sank two Japanese transports in the Gulf of Siam.

The Dutch forces were believed to have conceded some ground to the Japanese, landed Saturday from a big cruiser-protected transport fleet.

But it was indicated that under a long pre-arranged scorched earth policy they were destroying all oil-well installations as they retired.

The Japanese had landed men on Tarakan island, off the northeast coast of Borneo, and at three places in the Minahassa area of northeastern Celebes.

Thus they had obtained a foothold 900 miles east of Singapore. They were within 900 miles of Port Darwin, vitally important point on the north coast of Australia.

The Dutch commander in Tarakan island had said, as he awaited the Japanese attack, that the enemy would find nothing but charred oil plants and wells and "dead Dutchmen."

The Japanese had struck directly at the rich Netherlands Indies with 70,000,000 people in its 3,000 mile range. The blow had come just when Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, new united nations commander in chief in the far Pacific, was preparing to take up headquarters in Java.

There was no indication of the strength of the Japanese landing forces, though the mention in the communique of destruction of installations, under the scorched earth policy, was taken to mean that they had made good their foothold.

Dutch authorities had long expected the attacks, especially on Tarakan, whose world famous oil, of sufficiently high quality for aviation use, can be pumped direct to ships.

The airport of the island is far inland, in an inaccessible area, and it was indicated that if the Japanese penetrated the island it might be the center of resistance. It was said that if the Japanese succeeded in dominating the area it might be necessary for American ships to go around Australia at the cost of one week's sailing time.

U.S., British Speed Aid To Far East

SYDNEY, Australia— (INS) — Australian Navy Minister J. M. Makin went on record today with the assertion that the United States and Britain are speeding reinforcements to the Far East. "Reinforcements are coming from Britain and America as soon as possible to add to the protection of Australia and for the war theaters of the Far East," he said.

Meanwhile the Sydney Morning Telegraph demanded that Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies be reinforced immediately "with men from Australia, America, Canada, India and the Middle East, wherever an army is ready to land with planes and equipment from Iran, Syria, Libya and Burma and wherever fighters, bombers, guns and tanks are being held unemployed against a contingency which has not yet been seen."

British Use Scorched Earth Policy

LONDON — (INS) — A Rome radio broadcast, quoting reports from Tokyo, conceded today that a scorched earth policy is being carried out by the British in Malaya.

The Italian broadcast, picked up in London, said the British are destroying raw rubber and "everything that might be useful to the enemy."

It added that the warfare in Malaya had lost the character of a large coherent battle and has developed into a number of local engagements.

Japs Stage Repeated Raids On Singapore

Severe fighting raged on the western Malayan front, a new British military communique indicated, as the Nipponese continued their advance.

The military announcement did not state definitely whether Kuala Lumpur has been abandoned by the British. But it admitted the British defense forces have fallen back to new positions north of Serembam, a town situated 30 miles south of Kuala Lumpur. Serembam lies in the railway running southward to Singapore.

Furthermore, the communique said nine Japs dressed as Malays landed in the southeastern part of the state of Johore, just above Singapore island, but were quickly rounded up and taken into custody.

(British military authorities interpreted the communique as indicating the Japanese may have captured Kuala Lumpur, capital of the Federated Malay states and a strategic gateway to Singapore. Kuala Lumpur is about 790 miles above Singapore. The Japs already have claimed the Kuala Lumpur is in their hands.)

COMBAT TYPHUS

Hundreds of German Doctors and Nurses Rush to East Front.

BERN—(AP)—Germany, combatting an outbreak of typhus fever, recently has rushed hundreds of additional doctors and nurses to the eastern front and established an anti-epidemic center at Warsaw, the Berlin correspondent of the Swiss newspaper National Zeitung reported today.

A "battle against lice," the chief carrier of typhus, has resulted. Nazi soldiers, wearing heavy clothing for long periods without washing them, the newspaper said, have been beset with lice.

and navy fliers from non-combatant duties.

Addressing the group in the absence of Earle L. Johnson, Ohio Wing commander, who was called to Boston early yesterday, James R. Harrington, commander of the Fifth group, called for "as many volunteers as can be enlisted as quickly as possible."

Based on planes in the area, Harrington said that upwards of 1,000 civilian assistants would be needed to complete organization of the air unit.

He urged the group to aid in seeking enlistments, pointing out that the patrol was in need of trained personnel, especially mechanics, stenographers, auto drivers, radio operators, photographers, doctors and nurses.

Harrington said today that the group staff consisting of eight officers under his command, will probably be named by officials in Washington within the next week or 10 days.

The staff will include an executive officer, group adjutant, personnel and medical officer, intelligence and public relations officer, training and operations, equipment and supplies, transportation, and communications officers.

Training of the patrol will be based on military tactics, Harrington told the volunteers. Members will be the only uniformed unit of the Civilian Defense program. Uniforms will be identical to those of army officers. Personnel will be required to take military drill and discipline will be on a level comparable to the air corps.

"It's going to be a difficult organization to get into but an easy one to get out of," the commander warned.

He asserted that it would take some work to "work out the details" but that as soon as applications are approved by officials in Washington, actual operations of the patrol will be started.

Outlining the duties briefly, Harrington said the patrol would be trained for courier service, towing aerial gunnery targets, aircraft ferrying, flying ambulance planes, highway patrol duties and other functions related to defense.

Terming the volunteer organization the "nation's second line of air defense," he said.

"Whatever sacrifice we are called upon to make it cannot be too big."

"Our job is easy," he asserted, comparing the patrol's duties to those of men engaged in actual combat with the armed forces. "No matter how much we do, it is the least we can do."

Meanwhile Johnson today announced in Columbus that Ohio leads the nation in the enlistment of pilots for the Civilian Air patrol.

He declined to disclose the actual number of pilots enlisted in the state, but said the patrol ultimately would comprise about 4,000 fliers.

The Russian recapture of Lyudinovo tightened the vise on the Germans at Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow and the closest position to the capital still held by the Nazis. Salients have been driven westward both below and above Mozhaisk.

The Red armies reported forward smashes there and elsewhere along the vast front from the Arctic to the Black Sea.

The Russians said officially that they had captured the steel-producing city of Lyudinovo, 40 miles north of Bryansk and directly on the Bryansk-Vyazma defense line, which British reports have said Adolf Hitler told his men to hold at all costs.

The Russians also said they had reoccupied the railway junction of Tikhonova Pustyn, a few miles north of Kaluga, which is about half way between Moscow and Bryansk.

The British radio quoted a spokesman in Kuibyshev, alternate Russian capital, as saying the Russians were within 80 miles of Smolensk, the ruined Russian city 220 miles west of Moscow in which, Stockholm reports to London have said, Hitler set up headquarters on taking personal command of the German army.

A Vichy, France, news agency dispatch said the Russians had recaptured the famous city of Balaklava, on the Crimea, a gain which if confirmed would give the Soviets dominance of the southern extremity of the Crimean peninsula.

Meanwhile, the British admiralty announced its submarines had sent to the bottom of the Ionian sea a large Axis transport "laden with troops" and probably destroyed a supply vessel. The ships might have been headed for Libya with reinforcements for the fleeing Axis army.

The troops of German General Erwin Rommel were reported in London still withdrawing toward El Agheila, on the gulf of Sirte below Bengasi and Agedabia.

The RAF was active during the week-end, announcing fierce raids on the great German naval bases of Wilhelmshaven and Emden Saturday night, bomb attacks on airdromes in the low countries and docks at Boulogne, France, and on a convoy off the Dutch coast. Six planes were acknowledged lost.

The Germans raided Liverpool for the first time in months Saturday night. Ten persons were killed there and 10 others were seriously injured.

Reds Report Further Nazi Army Unrest

LONDON—(UP)—The Moscow radio reported as from Geneva today that Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German high command, had become suddenly "ill" and that several high officers associated with Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, dismissed commander in chief, had been arrested.

Two of Brauchitsch's aides, as well as officers more prominent, were among those arrested, Moscow reported.

The Free Netherlands radio, operated from London, said Swiss newspapers were reporting unrest among German troops who had arrived in France from the Russian front for a rest period. It said men of three German divisions stationed in the Besancon region had refused to return to the front and 62 of them had been executed. It was added that similar incidents has been reported from other places where German troops had refused to go back to the front unless they were given adequate winter clothing.

FLAMES CAUSE $3,500 DAMAGE

Two Fires Extinguished By Shelby Department Over Past Week-End.

SHELBY — Damage estimated at $3,500 was caused by two fires in Shelby over the week-end.

The fire department was called at 3:45 p. m. Sunday to the home of Bob Metz, 83 North Broadway, where the residents started a fire while trying to thaw out a pipe in the basement of the house with a blow-torch.

Fire damaged the basement ceiling at a new house owned by Alonzo Anderson at 14 Morning Side drive Saturday afternoon. No one was living in the building yet, firemen said, but the furnace had been started to keep the house warm. The furnace over heated and caused the ceiling to catch fire. The first story floor will have to be replaced and other damage done by smoke and water repaired. Work on the house had just been completed.

SHRINE PLANNED FOR RUTHERFORD

Death of Jehovah's Witnesses Sect Leader Is Revealed.

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(UP)—Followers of Judge Joseph Franklin Rutherford, leader of the Jehovah's Witness sect, planned today to establish a shrine at the sprawling Spanish-style "House of Prophets" in which he died.

Rutherford died Thursday at the age of 72, but his death was not revealed until Saturday night.

Rutherford's group claimed a membership of 2,000,000 in 36 countries It grew out of another called the Russellites, which was led by Charles Hayes Russell. The group attracted attention because of its anti-war stand and its religious objections to children saluting the American flag in school.

definition of parity equaling about 120 per cent of parity as now figured; (B) the market price of Oct. 1 or Dec. 15, whichever is higher; and (C) the 1919-29 average price. In addition, the senate bill would require Henderson to get Wickard's consent for farm price ceilings and to consult with representative industry committees before issuing any orders.

2. The house bill provides for an administrative board of review to which appeals could be taken from Henderson's rulings and thence to the circuit courts of appeal. The senate bill has no board and permits review by any court handy.

Dovetailing of the agricultural restrictions of the two bills is expected to cause the greatest trouble in conference.

In two important respects the senate bill carries pprovisions which the house bill omits completely. They are:

1. The senate would permit the administrator to enforce his price regulations by requiring dealers in commodities to take out licenses. Although licenses could be had for the asking, the administrator could revoke a license for a second violation of the regulations, preventing the dealer from handling the commodity further. The licensing feature was offered in the house but eliminated on the floor.

2. The senate would permit the administrator to buy, sell, store or use commodities—except strategic wartime materials—if such action is necessary to prevent price increases.

Under either measure the government would not be forced to act with respect to any prices, but would have authority to do so as soon as they got out of line, with the exceptions noted in the case of farm products.

He pointed out that total investment by private capital, without thought of profit, at the port was well over $100,000, exclusive of the 24 airplanes quartered at the field.

"The city is fortunate in that this is the only airport with which we are familiar where private individuals have erected hangers, offices and barracks," he added. "Such expenditures are invariably borne by the municipalities."

Vandals Steal 1 Parking Meter And Rob Another

It's not unusual for parking meters to cause trouble for motorists but now they're becoming headaches for the police.

Since Christmas, police have found at least ten of the meters, torn from their foundations, damaged, or stolen.

Over the week-end, two more meters were added to the list of casualties. Patrolmen found one of the meters on West Fourth street damaged and the money removed, and another meter stolen.

Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals promised that any persons caught tampering with the meters would be given a heavy fine or jail sentence.

Police found four meters torn loose from their foundations in a single week since the holidays. Another was found in a creek near Lucas, where it had been tossed.

that they intend to question the committee appointments at tonight's meeting.

City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner, asked to make a search for legal precedure for Miller's appointive authority, said today that he had not "found any other appointing authority as yet."

Wagner said that council had agreed to follow Roberts rules of order in organizing from as far back as 1903. He said that Miller had merely followed the precedent established for at least 38 years. The solicitor admited, however, that council had it in its own power to reorganize by passing legislation changing the organization method.

The only face missing from executive circles today was that of Schuyler E. LeMunyon, sewer superintendent, whose job was abolished last week. LeMunyon is still on the city payroll, however, as a laborer in the sewer department.

The appropriations bill to be considered tonight represents a cut of $51,613 below the general appropriation for 1941. Council's finance committee slashed $37,500 from the city department's original requests last Wednesday night.

Price Control Should Come Quickly

DELAY in passing and putting into effect a sound and comprehensive price control law has already given opportunity for considerable unjustified price-boosting, with serious threat of runaway inflation unless the movement is quickly halted.

General price control, including the essential elements of wages and farm products, was too hot for politically minded congressmen to handle before actual entry into war, and it is still being bandied about in a way that indicates faint realization of the tragic consequences of extortionate prices at a time when everybody is being called upon to make sacrifices of all kinds to support the war program.

The senate banking committee, in reporting a price bill, said that "of all the consequences of war, except human slaughter, inflation is the most destructive," and unless congress finally agrees on a price control law that places reasonable restraint on all elements contributing to commodity prices paid by the consumer, inflation may be regarded as a much more imminent danger than invasion.

Much of the debate on various price control proposals has been on such controversial phases as wages and farm prices, both of which should be reasonable, but without appearance that either group is attempting to profit unduly at the expense of their fellow-Americans employed in other work, or to the detriment of the nation which is now engaged in a struggle for self-preservation.

Under a strong price control law, with enforcement authority vested in one competent man—not a committee, or "board," as was proposed by Senator Taft—order can be restored in present chaotic price conditions and people can be spared much of the hardship that will ensue quickly unless fair limits are placed on prices of necessities.

Conference of American Nations

MOVEMENT toward further hemispheric unity of action will be sought at a conference of representatives of the twenty-one American republics which is to open in Rio de Janeiro Thursday.

With Central American and Caribbean countries already joined in declaring war on the Axis powers, and diplomatic relations with the Axis severed by Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela, there would be an advantage in having all of the countries of both continents openly aligned with the United Nations, as this would transform the entire Western Hemisphere into a vast maneuvering ground for Allied armed forces.

A reciprocal agreement has been reached with Mexico under which the troops of either nation can be moved across the other, and the United States is also permitted to use the ports and flying fields of a number of South American countries in military or naval operations.

Brazil has declared and demonstrated solidarity with the United States and may again get into the war, as she did in the first World war, and belief is now being expressed that Argentina may decide on a more determined anti-Axis course than has thus far been evidenced. It is recalled that Argentina maintained strict neutrality in the last war.

As the entire Western Hemisphere is under threat of Axis aggression, with the southern continent appearing particularly vulnerable to first attack, it appears that union for military and economic action may make strong appeal to conferees at Rio.

Requirements For Generalship

RECENT changes in high command, military and naval, recalls similar experiences in the Civil war. Then, Lincoln made change after change before, in Grant, he found a man who could hold his own against Lee.

A possible clue to successful generalship has just been revealed by the well-known southern editor and historian, George Fort Milton. His "Conflict, the American Civil War," just published, maintains that generally "the outstanding leaders proved to be men who, after early military schooling and subaltern service in the regulars, left the army for civilian activity and did not return until the Civil war broke out." Civilian experience, says Milton, freed these men from the fetters of military discipline, and enabled them "to maintain unimpaired the imagination which a commander in the field must have." Such men were Grant, Sherman, McClellan and Stonewall Jackson. Forrest, one of the most successful guerrilla leaders, had no formal military training at all.

The British have had trouble with the stereotyped military mind, against which H. G. Wells has crusaded with particular vehemence. It may be hoped that West Pointers and Annapolis graduates have escaped the ossifying that a lifetime of obedience to higher-ups sometimes causes.

Inspired War Song Awaited

MUSIC PUBLISHERS are receiving a flood of war songs these days. Song writers may be moved both by their own sincere patriotism and by a natural desire to "cash in" on a popular mood. So far, no song has come to light that looks or sounds as lasting as "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Dixie," "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Yankee Doodle," or "Over There," all of which were inspired by war.

Edwin Hughes, president of the National Music Council, believes that a stirring and serious work of real value will be written, but adds that it must come from inspiration and probably cannot be produced on order.

When the right song comes, it will "catch on" without any particular fanfare or build-up. Meanwhile there are some quite good patriotic songs in the nation's repertory which may be sung with satisfaction.

Word comes from Atlanta that "Man Mountain" Dean, the bearded wrestler, has enlisted in the army—but this will not entirely supply the need for heavy tanks.

Joe Louis weighed in for the Baer fight heavier than ever before—or at about the point the old-time champs quit the ring to open a saloon.

MORE 'TIME TABLE' TROUBLE FOR HITLER

Need Fighter and Torpedo Planes

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Just as the effectivenes in military strategy—as distinguished from mere destruction and terrorism—of the bomber was over-estimated in the early stages of the war, so the fighter and the torpedo plane, especially the latter, were underestimated.

The huge production promised by President Roosevelt in his address to congress included all types of planes. There is a strong feeling, however, that a larger quota of the planes should be fighters and torpedo planes and a smaller proportion of bombers than is now contemplated.

For obvious military reasons there will be no attempt here to break down the classification the president makes. He refers to "combat" planes, including bombers, fighters, dive bombers and torpedo planes. The classification "combat" does not include training planes, just as necessary because the planes would not be very useful if men were not trained to fly them.

CURIOUSLY enough, the "fighter" plane is really more a defensive than an offensive weapon while the heavy bomber is primarily an offensive weapon.

Fighter planes are essential to protect bombers, because a fighter plane can make short work of a bomber, a dive bomber or a torpedo plane if it catches one of these without protection from other fighters.

It was the concentration of British fighter planes against German bombers which was one of the chief reasons for the failure of the Nazis to crush Britain early in the fall of 1940. Goering sent over plenty of fighters, but the British fighters had strict orders to avoid combat with them whenever possible, and concentrate on the invading bombers.

This policy, coupled with the fortunate circumstance that Sir Hugh Dowding had forced the equipment of the British fighters with such heavy fire power (failure to do which explains the utter futility of the much vaunted Italian military aviation) took a murderous toll of the invaders. Some think it was this toll which defeated the Nazi objective. Some think the Germans would have won had they decided to pay the price.

It was after this that the Torpedo plane came into its own. The theories of the admirals, British as well as our own, about the almost invulnerability of battleships to air attacks, have been partially justified so far as bombers are concerned. But the torpedo plane has proved the deadliest foe of the big battle wagons. It was these planes which smashed Italian ships at Taranto. It was a plane-fired torpedo which crippled the Bismarck's ability to steer; torpedoes which sank the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.

STRANGELY enough, the only battleship sunk by a bomb in the whole war so far has been a Japanese vessel, sunk by one of our army bombers.

For a long time the whole strategy of anti-Axis victory was to bomb Germany into submission. The British called on us for more and more bombers with that ultimate objective. Incidentally they were busy as beavers making fighters themselves, liked their fighters better than ours, but considered our bombers superior to those they made.

The idea of bombing Germany into submission has been abandoned. This means that more emphasis from now on must be placed on other types of planes, against the day of expeditionary forces promised by the president.

Hypnotism as Stunt and Science.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

JUST as I was engaged in a learned study of the famous Mesmer, I found that hypnotism is having a new vogue as a stunt and a science.

The subject aroused a good deal of interest in my own circle of friends and I found that one of my medical colleagues had stated dogmatically that hypnotism was all bunk and in fact, that there was no such thing.

Let me say at once that hypnotism is a very real and actual thing and there is no special mystery about it. The hypnotic state is induced most easily by the rhythmic stimulation of a single sense when all the other senses are at rest. In other words, if a person is put in a quiet room, in a chair, with all the muscles relaxed and all other lights out, and a light is flashed at regular intervals into his eyes, a state of hypnosis will result.

Suggestions and Suggestibility.

There are exceptions to this, of course, because a state of hypnosis will not result in one hundred per cent of instances of this kind—depending upon the suggestibility of the subject and his state of complacence with the experiment.

The same result can be obtained under the same conditions by substituting the rhythmic sound of a bell for the rhythmic flash of the light. The same condition can be obtained by rhythmic stroking of the face or by fixedly staring at the eyes.

In other words, hypnotism is not a subjugation of the will of one person by the will of another.

No one can be hypnotized against his will. Suggestion and suggestibility of the subject are potent factors in induction of the hypnotic state. Smart people are more easily hypnotized than stupid people. Idiots, imbeciles and morons can not be hypnotized at all, although curiously, some animals can, as witness the famous experiment of the hen's being made to look fixedly at a chalk line.

No Mystery.

The hypnotic state is not mysterious either. Nobody can do more in the hypnotic state than he can normally. The only advantage of the hypnotic state is that every distraction to the unification of the will is removed. In other words, if you are not strong enough normally to lie out stiff between two carpenter's saw horses, supported only by your heels and the back of your head, you will not be able to do it in the hypnotic state. But in the hypnotic state, any distraction which weakens your muscles is removed, and you can do it better.

Whether or not suggestions made in the hypnotic state are effective, depends on many unpredictable factors. If a person is told during hypnosis to get up no matter where he is and wind the clock at 4 o'clock the next afternoon, he may or may not do it.

That is what make hypnosis a very undependable weapon of treatment. You may be able to cure a drunkard with it, or you may make him worse. You may be able to cure a case of hysteria, or you may multiply it four times.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Conversion of Automobile Plants Badly Fumbled By Divided Control

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—If the president needed any further demonstration of the ineffectualness of his dollar-a-year-men in the OPM, he got it within 24 hours after he announced his new war program.

"Business-as-usual" minded motor moguls, summoned to Washington to draft belated plans for the conversion of their industry, in effect thumbed their noses at OPM—with the support of ex-motor mogul Director Knudsen.

Inside story of this episode, one month after Pearl Harbor, is one of the most amazing of the amazing record of OPM.

It started last Monday when heads of auto management and labor met with OPM, army and navy chiefs. Knudsen opened the conference with a brief talk in which he complained that he had been "kicked around" and that the motor moguls had been "kicked around." But despite this, he declared he was proud of their contribution to national defense.

This brought a big hand from the auto executives.

They then took the floor and announced they were willing to convert their plants to war production—provided the government met their terms. Foremost of these claims were one more month of auto production beyond Jan. 31, plus escalator clauses in their war contracts to enable them to raise prices to meet "unforeseen developments."

In other words the auto moguls were willing to make tanks, planes and guns for the government provided they were assured of a normal profit.

None of this got out of the closed-door meeting. The OPM news release reported only that everything was sweetness and light and that the industry was all set to do everything wanted of it.

Note—Also not mentioned by the press release was the fact that Walter Reuther, dynamic young vice president of the United Auto Workers, had outlined a complete program for the rapid conversion of the industry to war production by pooling tools, patents, and equipment. Knudsen and the plant owners do not favor any pooling arrangement. But Reuther's speech, the clearest made, drew a big hand from the army and navy officials present.

Our Way—or Nothing.

TUESDAY, the day the president announced his $59,000,000,000 program, the conference got down to the business of setting up a committee of the industry to draw up the conversion plans.

Labor demanded representation on this key committee. The employers balked.

After a hot morning wrangle over the issue, the conference adjourned and the OPM board, consisting of Knudsen, Associate Director Hillman, Undersecretary of War Patterson and Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, went into a huddle.

Knudsen sided with his former auto associates.

But he was outvoted three to one. Hillman, Patterson and Forrestal supported the laborites.

With this decision made, the conference was reconvened Tuesday night. The auto moguls made no secret of their disapproval, but argued no further about labor being represented. Instead they trained their guns on the power of the Committee for Conversion.

Again with the backing of Knudsen, they demanded that the committee be limited only to making "recommendations"—in other words, depriving the committee of real authority. The labor representatives insisted that the committee be given the power to "determine" what measures should be taken to convert the industry to war production.

The debate waxed hot and heavy. At one point Knudsen said, "Remember, I have the final say-so."

"Make that double, Bill," quietly interjected Hillman. "I'm on OPM too, you know."

Enter the Lawyers.

FINALLY, after hours of argument, Knudsen gave some ground and it was decided to have the OPM legal staff draw up an order setting up the joint committee.

The next morning the legal staff—former Wall Street and corporation attorneys—re-muddied the waters by announcing that OPM did not have the authority to delegate any of its powers to a committee. No such objection had ever before been raised regarding any of the management committees appointed by OPM, but on this committee, where labor would be represented, the lawyers found all sorts of obstacles.

Again the OPM masterminds went into a huddle—out of which came a compromise about which everybody is in doubt.

Management says it goes too far; labor says not far enough. OPM is hoping for the best. Meanwhile the war rages fiercer in the Pacific. But the auto industry, greatest single producing force in the U. S. A., is not much nearer conversion than before the conference.

Note—After the conference the auto labor leaders told influential members of congress that no committee would accomplish anything in converting industries to war production as long as dollar-a-year-men remained in control of OPM.

Dress Reform Pact.

THE president let Senate Republican Leader Charles McNary in on a "secret" during a chat with congressional chiefs in Speaker Sam Rayburn's office following his momentous message to congress.

Seated in one of Rayburn's big, comfortable easy chairs the president remarked, "Charley, what do you think of this suit I'm wearing?"

The president was attired in a dark blue serge business suit instead of the cutaway coat and striped trousers he usually wears on formal occasions.

"I think it's very becoming, Mr. President," said McNary. "I like it better than formal clothes. Why do you ask?"

"I'll let you in on a secret," said the president with a mischievous smile. "When Winston Churchill and I were drafting post-war plans during his visit we decided to devote one plank to a clothes reform. We decided that after the war there were to be no more stiff shirts and cutaway coats.

"That sort of formality smacks too much of the Axis. We are going to propose that everyone dress in ordinary clothes. It's more comfortable and sensible and expressive of the times of wiping out class distinctions."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — In the small capital groups that assemble in Washington these days around the luncheon tables, over cocktails, or on "off evenings," a visitor would be impressed by the great number of times President Roosevelt is quoted as one of the major prophets of this war who has been almost invariably right.

It is something that has nothing to do with politics, with factional fights, with approval or disapproval of domestic policies. It is an expression of confidence by friend and foe, alike, that in the theater of world affairs and international conflict, the president has done a neat piece of turn-calling.

WHEN Winston Churchill stood in the senate chamber not so long ago and said that by 1943 the democracies would be able to take the initiative, those words were considered throughout the world—and rightly so—with special gravity.

But in the days since then, there are many in those small Washington circles who remember President Roosevelt said all that and more way back last summer. They are wondering now if he didn't anticipate himself by more than four months—and if he didn't thus say in August what the United States would come to full awareness of in January.

It was a sweltering Tuesday afternoon press conference. The president, lolling back in shirtsleeves, began what at first seemed a rambling discourse on the state of the nation and the world. He used, as he often does, that indirect method - drawing parallels from other days and other crises. He talked of World War II continuing through 1943 and said plainly that the people of the United States were not yet aware of the staggering task ahead of them.

THEN, he shifted to a quotation from Carl Sandburg's great biography of Lincoln. The time was 1862, September. The Union had suffered some of its severest reverses. The Battle of Antietam —"the bloodiest single day of fighting of the war" — was just over. Lincoln was talking to a delegation of women, headed by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore of Chicago. President Roosevelt used the Civil war president's direct quotes.

"'I have no word of encouragement to give,' was the slow, blunt reply (from Mr. Lincoln. 'The military situation is far from bright and the country knows it as well as I do.'

"The president went on: 'The fact is the people have not yet made up their minds that we are at war with the South. They have not buckled down to the determination to fight this war through; for they have got the idea into their heads that we are going to get out of this fix somehow by strategy! That's the word — STRATEGY! General McClellan thinks he is going to whip the rebels by strategy; and the army has got the same notion. They have no idea that the war is to be carried on and put through by hard, tough fighting, that it will hurt somebody; and no headway is going to be made while this delusion lasts'."

Even in August, when there was no Pearl Harbor, no loss of Manila, or Guam, or Wake, President Roosevelt's words seemed ominous. After moments of silence, one reporter asked how the president thought the "lead" on this story should be written. Mr. Roosevelt didn't hesitate. He said: "President quotes Lincoln and draws parallel."

IN THE hours and even days that followed, I remember the dozens of times that newsmen and official Washington asked: "Just what DID the president mean?" There were those who said he meant that we were approaching shooting war. There were those who contended he was only speaking figuratively.

But within a week or so, the "quotes from Lincoln" press conference was forgotten completely. It's only now that some are remembering and dragging it out for re-examination in the light of recent events and what now appears to lie ahead.

A Farmer's Diary

Fox Tales

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ONE MORNING just at daylight when I came near my chicken house," said the old farmer, "I saw ten fine layin' hens flat on the ground. The white feathers made 'em look biggef than they were, in the early light. I examined one. It was stiff and cold and I saw that its neck was torn. Another one had a patch of feathers ripped from its back.

"At first I though it might have been a weasel, but when it got light enough, I saw the track of what looked like a slender dog hurrying over the plowed field. Here and there a feather had dropped. The evidence was clear, for the path led around the hill toward a thicket. A fox was the guilty killer.

"A farm boy down the road had a hound that would follow no other trail. I asked the boy to bring him down. As soon as he let the hound out of the car, it smelled around, then hightailed it down across the field. We found the den, but 'twas too deep and thick with roots to dig him out. My how that hound stood at the entrance and howled! Even in the night, he broke his chain and was off to the foxes' den.

"After that I washed the front of the poultry house with sheep dip. I guess the dogs and that terrible smell were enough to frighten him, for he's never appeared around our place for more'n a year. There's foxes up in that thicket, though—but mostly they don't harm farmers much. I wouldn't like to see 'em all killed off—they're too cunning, and then they rid the fields of mice, rats, rabbits and even grasshoppers.

"When I was a boy—that was more'n 70 years ago—a widow down our way caught a fox and killed him—with her hands! She heard a chicken squawk one afternoon and when she ran in there was a large red fox biting at a pullet's throat. The widdy got mad! She grabbed him by the neck—she was a strong woman—and banged and kicked him against the strong oak siding until he sorto' fainted. Then she took an ax and finished him."

"You can vouch for the truth of the story?" I asked, mildly.

"Sure enough! Wild animals was more common then than now—and widows who lived alone could take care of themselves—why, I've heard my grandpa tell how a widdy he knew chased a bear all over her yard with a broomstick."

Margaret Scott, Harold Fleck Become Engaged

With the return of Harold Fleck to his home here after a month's visit on the west coast, friends are learning of the announcement of his engagement to Miss Margaret Louise Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott, of Seville Way, San Mateo, Calif. The Scott family moved from Mansfield to the west coast a year ago Mr. Scott is associated with Westinghouse in San Francisco.

Guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Scott on Christmas day were friends who had been acquainted in Ohio and now live in California. Announcement of the couple's engagement was made at the dinner. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Scott is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school and attended San Mateo Junior college. Mr. Fleck, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Fleck, R. D 5, was graduated from Kentucky Military Institute at Lyndon, Ky, and is now associated with Westinghouse in this city. He will leave on Jan. 16 to join the infantry as a second lieutenant.

Many Activities Planned For Next Several Months

Among the numerous activities planned by the American Association of University Women for January and the ensuing months are the following: "The History and Geography of Japan in Relation to the War" is the new topic to be undertaken by the Current Problems group of the A. A. U. W., with Miss Margaret Tinsley as leader during the months ahead. On Tuesday, Jan. 13, all members are to invite at least one guest within the membership to the meeting of the group to be held at the home of Miss Margaret DeWitt, 199 Helen avenue. Each member is to bring items of current interest for discussion. On Jan. 27, Mrs. H. L. Knox, 498 Edgewood road, will be hostess for another meeting of the group, at which time "Education and Religion of Japan in Relation to the War" will be discussed.

An all-day Red Cross sewing meeting will be held on Jan. 17 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Greene, 251 Parkway drive, beginning at 9 a. m. Each member is to furnish her own sandwiches for lunch. Coffee and tea will be served by the hostess.

Meeting of the Activity Arts group is scheduled for Jan. 17 to be held in the art rooms of Johnny Appleseed junior high school. Final event for the month will be the mid-year semi-formal dance to be given at the Mansfield-Leland hotel ballroom on Jan. 31. Dancing from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. will be to the music of Nels Blocker's orchestra. Door prize will be awarded at 11 o'clock. Committee in charge of arrangements is comprised of Miriam Neese, general chairman, Miss DeWitt, Mrs. E. P. Gaar, Mrs. L. A. Hautzenroeder, Mrs. V. A. Simpson, Mrs. Grant Ward, Mrs. Clifford Faust, Mrs. Homer Swift, and Adeline McCready.

On Feb. 3, the branch will have a guest meeting at the Congregational church. Dinner will be served at 6:15 p. m. and the program will begin at 7:30 o'clock. George A. Washburne will present "Behind Contemporary History." Mrs. Kenneth Bu... will be hostess for a benefit bridge party to be held at 7:30 p. m. on Feb. 10 Another dinner-meeting is scheduled to take place at the Congregational church on March 3. There will be a style show sponsored by the M. O'Neil company and the program subject will be "The Effect of War on American Fashion"

April meeting date is the seventh. At that time a party will be given at the Mansfield-Leland hotel with Mrs. J. F. McLean as chairman. Dinner will be served at the Women's club at 6:15 p. m. on May 5. Program, which will begin at 7:30 o'clock, will be entitled "The Arts and Crafts of Western Reserve" with Mrs. Earl Knittle as chairman.

Miss Emma Waring and Mrs. R. A. Rowlands will be co-chairmen for a tea to be given on May 26 for senior girls. Time and place will be announced later.

Cheated Wife Urged to Keep Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"How could he have forgotten our beautiful and wonderful love?"

I am quoting from a letter received in my mail a day or two ago from an agonized wife whose husband has been unfaithful to her. She said:

"How could he, who seemed to adore me, become the lover of a silly girl? And afterward coolly tell me that the whole wretched affair is blotted out and that we can start all over again.

"I am 35 years old and we have a dear little girl and boy. I have loved my husband devotedly and I supposed he returned that love. I still love him.

"How about divorce? The mere thought of living without him and of seeing someone else in my place nearly kills me. Should I accept the statements he now makes and make a pretense of continuing the life he has ruined? Either course seems to me impossible.

"Some of my friends tell me to ignore my tragedy, or even to profit by it. They tell me almost any concession can be won from a husband in a case like mine.

"But all I want is my dear one's love. I don't want to bargain for a new car or a trip to Florida, or anything else. If I only knew I could be sure of his love."

She signs herself "Wretchedly Unhappy."

To a woman in this plight—sensitive, idealistic, romantic, and deeply wounded—almost any advice is unpalatable. Yet here is mine, offered with a clear conscience:

Keep your husband. Hold tight to your marriage. Patch up the break in your life.

I don't say this merely because you have two children, although they are seriously to be considered. Children shouldn't be deprived of a father if there's any help for it.

I urge it because I think you still have a chance for happiness. This may be hard for a woman to understand, but I assure you it is possible for a man to be guilty of a temporary infidelity without losing or perhaps even impairing his love for his wife.

Another thing—you don't know just how this affair of his started. Perhaps the girl was almost entirely to blame. Your husband lost his head for the time being, and now that he's recovered it, he heartily wishes the thing had never taken place and hopes you will help him forget it.

I'm not excusing him. I'm merely pointing out that he may not have been a monster at all—just a weak human being—and that deep down in his heart the girl who tempted him has never displaced you for a moment.

You probably would never have acted as he has acted. But men are different. You might as well admit it. Now that he has whole-heartedly returned to you, I suggest you don't reproach him any more, or even allow yourself to act other than naturally.

Have a good deal of company for a while. That will make it easier. It is also just as well to let your husband see how much your friends value you. Without withdrawing your love from him, which you can't do and shouldn't do, indicate to him that you are not solely dependent on his affection.

Futhermore, don't allow yourself to have red eyelids or a catch in your voice. Have your hair waved, wear pretty dresses, and accept all the attentions that your repentant husband offers. This is much better than staging a continuous domestic tragedy.

I suspect that in a year from now your present trouble will seem as unreal as nightmare. Believe me, thousands of women have followed the course that I am counselling—and without regretting it.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

Your kitchen is neat as a pin—but how about your apron? This Marian Martin design, Pattern 9887, looks fresh-as-a-daisy and is easy to stitch up quickly with the step-by-step Sew Chart. It's easy to don quickly, too,—the back bodice is cut all in-one so you can slip the apron over your head and tie it in back. In front, that long center panel is gracefully shaped to give you a narrower waistline ...and it may have two different necklines, a square or a pointed one. This same panel may be made of contrast together with the back bodice. Bows or buttons are optional, and ruffling or ric-rac edging.

Pattern 9887 may be ordered only in sizes small (34-36), medium (38-40), large (42-44), and extra large (46-48). Small size requires 2⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and 3¼ yards ric-rac.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your Size, Name, Address, and Style Number.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary lifted her head spiritedly and her eyes, as they met mine, were filled with eager speculation.

"You'll not only have to give me the cards," she said, "but outline just how I'm going to play them. I don't mind telling you that I never was more jittery in my life than at this prospect of going over to see Noel, when he's laid down the law that he'll hear nothing whatever about Stephen Redfield. I haven't the slightest idea of what I'm going to say to him, and I'm scared to tears about what he's likely to say to me."

"You needn't be," I told her. "In the first place, I don't think you listened very carefully while I told you what Noel said."

"I did so," she answered childishly. "But I guess I couldn't see the woods for the trees—or the trees for the woods, whichever it is—at that, because I was so obsessed by the thought of the poor boy's suffering. But I'm all ears now."

Things To Remember.

"There are two things you must remember," I repeated. "One is that not by word or look are you to remind Noel of Redfield or your plans for—interviewing him, shall we say?

"That's a good Greek word for it," she said, with the gamin grin which generally flashes across her face at some point in her conversation, no matter how serious.

"And I shall obey you implicitly. As far as my ever-loving husband will hear from me, Steve was hanged yesterday, and I didn't even attend the funeral."

"See that you keep that in mind," I told her, smiling in spite of myself. "Now the second thing I'd like you to consider is this, Noel said: 'Until this is over, I shall make no engagements for or with her myself. But I shall always be at her service if she wishes to go anywhere' "

"I get you," she said. "You think it would be a nice gesture if I went over to our apartment, and told Noel that I was lonesome and bored, and wished he'd take me out for the afternoon until theater time, which would include going out to dinner."

"That is what I was going to suggest," I said, "only—"I hesitated.

"You mean your father might want me to go out with Steve for dinner tonight, if I could wangle it?"

"He might," I said. Then I put a quick question.

"What time of day do you usually make those excursions with Steve to that little foreign restaurant?"

"Usually in the afternoon, when there isn't a matinee," she rejoined. "We go down for tea—Steve is most awfully, awfully English you know—but once in a while we go for dinner; never after the theater at night. Little Stevie has thrown out hints several times that it might be amusing down here toward midnight, which I've always side-stepped."

"I'll be responsible to my father, Mary," I said.

"But what about this humble pie that he wants me to eat for Steve, to get him back into good humor?" she asked, with a sudden raucous note in her voice. "If he should stage that for some time this afternoon, it would shoot my outing with Noel into a cocked hat. Besides, Noel couldn't help guessing the reason for the interruption, and that would be—"

"Yes, I know," I said, "but you haven't the slightest reason for uneasiness. Remember, I am to see Redfield before you do, and I shall maneuver things so you will see him at the theater tonight for the first time since your disagreement. How will that do?"

Tasty Ways To Serve Oysters

By BETSY NEWMAN

I seem to harp somewhat on the succulent oyster as an aid to home cooks. Maybe it is because I have been neglecting the oyster in my home menus and keep reminding myself of their goodness and excellent food values. Scalloped oysters are a favorite, and I'll give you a recipe for them, or you might like oyster patties for a change.

Today's Menu.

Scalloped Oysters or Oyster Patties.
Stewed Tomatoes Glazed Carrots
Celery Pickles
Cherry Charlotte
Coffee or Substitute

Scalloped Oysters.

1 qt. Oysters — Salt, pepper
Dry bread or cracker crumbs — Milk
1 tbsp. butter

Put oysters in layers in buttered baking dish, alternating with layers of the bread or cracker crumbs seasoning each layer to taste. When dish is filled, add strained oyster liquor and sufficient milk to moisten Cover top with crumbs and 1 tablespoon butter in bits, and bake ½ hour in hot oven

* * *

Oyster Patties.

1 pt. mashed potatoes — ½ tsp. minced onion
1 egg, beaten — 1 pt. oysters

Add beaten egg and onion to mashed potatoes and form into cakes. Split cakes with sharp knife, lay 2 or 3 oysters on lower part of each and replace top. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) until patties are brown, and serve garnished with parsley or watercress.

* * *

Cherry Charlotte.

2 tbsps. plain gelatin — ⅓ cp. sugar
½ cp. cold water — 2 egg whites
1 No. 2 can sour pitted cherries and juice — 6 to 10 lady fingers, vanilla wafers or sponge cake strips
⅔ cp. sugar
2 egg yolks — 1 cp. whipping cream
1tbsp. lemon juice.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Combine in double boiler the ⅔ cup sugar, cherry juice, slightly beaten egg yolks and lemon juice, and cook until slightly thickened. Add gelatin and cherries, remove from heat and chill until thickened, but not stiff. Fold in egg whites beaten with ⅓ cup sugar; also the whipped cream. Line a mold or pan with lady fingers and fill with gelatin mixture. Chill thoroughly, and serve garnished with some of the cherries reserved for the purpose. Serves 6 to 8. Try it out on the family and then remember it when Washington's birthday rolls around.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Excellent augury for progress and highly productive effort is read from this day's lunar transits. It should be a propitious time to make a swift start with new and ambitious projects, particularly if they involve change, travel, correspondence, dealing with lawyers, agencies and the public. The latter contact should be notably successful and gratifying.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and progressive year, with large and important new projects bringing unexpected results. This applies especially to all pertaining to travel, writings, litigation, agencies and communications of any nature, as well as business and professional aims. Public, community and group relations should flourish and bring prestige. It would be well not to let good judgment be overruled by over-enthusiasm.

Why Depend Upon a Chance Recommendation?

The recommendation of some well-meaning but misinformed person is too often the basis upon which a funeral director is selected.

The best guide is to know something about the funeral services that are available in this community. To that end we invite inquiry, and inspection of our Funeral Home as well as other facilities.

Those who have investigated find this funeral service unusually well equipped, and our prices no higher than they would pay elsewhere.

Simple Clothes Call for a Good Figure

By MME. QUI VIVE

Befitting the times and the numerous activities of women, fashions are simple and practical. That, you will allow, is all to the good. There's not much danger of overdressing; overdressing is responsible for most of the frumpy ones we see. Those girls just don't know when they've got on enough dry goods, so they add a fussy bow, put doodads on their bodices. Smart ladies know that they themselves should dominate their attire, never let duds overshadow them.

Simple clothes call for good figures. They don't disguise defects of shape, as do fussier models. So, the pretty dollies who are built like a stalk of asparagus are busy trying to get busty. She who had indulged too freely in the good things of the table is seeking means and ways of cutting down measurements. Even those persons whose proportions are correct must mind their meals so that they stay that way.

The standard is what it should be—a firm, high bust, a neat waist line, normal hips. The physical structure is one of rounded slenderness. Ankles and wrists trim. No sharp elbows. Legs tapering gracefully from thigh to knee with no bumps any place. Blessed with a silhouette that matches this description, a girl is marching along the beauty road.

A well-fitted foundation garment, one that tucks the hips back and under, lifts the breasts and flattens the tummy, is a reminder of the need of good posture. You can't fold up very well when you are neatly packed in a silken cylinder. If you did do that you'd be betraying the trust of your corsetiere, letting her down.

How you feel has a lot to do with how you look, as we all know through contact with the lady in the looking glass. The mental state affects the body. The lazy, selfish woman, demanding attentions from every member of the family, takes on flesh. She doesn't move around enough to keep fat cells from lighting on her. The high-strung, nervous, over-active woman who expects everybody to work as hard as she does keeps down to skin and bone.

The formula for the good figure consists of wise eating, plenty of exercise, a balance of work and relaxation, mental hygiene. If one feels tip-top one is likely to display the brisk step, a body carried with splendor.

Easy-to-Make Wholesome Cakes

It's so easy for meals to get into a rut. But it's easy enough to pull them out, and January is an awfully good time to do it. A new cake here, a different salad there and meals can't help getting a fresh lift.

Sometimes, the new recipe proves so popular that in no time at all, it becomes an old standby. That is probably what will happen to these recipes for two easy-to-make, wholesome cakes. They will earn the space they take up in your recipe file.

Molasses Cocoanut Cake.

½ cup shortening
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg
1 cup pure New Orleans molasses
2½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup milk
1 can moist cocoanut, cut with scissors

Cream together sugar and shortening; add egg and beat in well. Mix in molasses. Sift together dry ingredients, and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add cocoanut. Bake in greased and floured loaf pan 8x8x2 in moderate oven (350° F.) 45 minutes.

Spicy Crumb Cake.

1¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons ginger
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup sugar
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
¼ cup pure New Orleans molasses
½ cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda

Mix and sift flour, spices, baking powder and sugar. Cut in the butter. When mixture is like coarse meal, remove ½ cup. Beat eggs and combine with molasses, then add buttermilk with which soda has been thoroughly mixed. Combine dry and liquid ingredients. Pour mixture into 8" square or 9" round greased pan and sprinkle the reserved ½ cup of crumbled mixture over top. Bake in a moderate over of 350° F. for 40 minutes. Serve warm or cold.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

PROTECT YOURSELF, TOO

Just as an army engaged in an offensive must protect its flanks from counter-attack, so must a bridge player, bent on an offensive operation, think of two things. One of them is finding enough trick takers for his own purposes. The other is prevention of trick taking by the opponents, which may give them so many tricks there will not be enough left for him, even if he has sufficient trick takers. That is why a bidder must sometimes choose No Trumps for a contract instead of a suit, as defensive ruffs may threaten his project, or the suit chosen for trump may not "break."

That was a brilliant bid by North, who was Herbert J. Gerst, of Norfolk, Va., the chairman who has set a goal of $150,000 for his state in the Bridge-for-Ambulances campaign, headed nationally by this writer, and in no time put his home city more than 60 per cent beyond its quota of $20,000. He bid and played this deal in the national championships at Richmond.

When West stuck in that sacrifice bid of 7-Hearts, Mr. Gerst waited to see if his partner wanted to double it, making a very fine forcing pass. When his partner decided a double of the sacrifice would not produce as many points as the grand slam, and bid 7-Spades, Mr. Gerst put on his thinking cap. After plenty of study, he realized the side had too good a fit in the side suit of diamonds, and that the opening lead might produce a defensive ruff, through finding the partner of the leader blank.

He also realized that, with fitting suits, there ought to be 13 tricks in the deal if either of the two suits would break fortuitously. Maybe spades would break badly, maybe diamonds would. But playing it at suit would necessitate a good break in the suit chosen. At No Trumps either suit, breaking right, should be enough. As it turned out, the 7-Spades could not be made. Other pairs played at that and were set. But his bid enabled his side to gain the maximum possible result, getting six tricks in diamonds, three in clubs, one in hearts and three in spades.

Teaching The Baby To Build

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

The child from one to two years of age is more interested in destroying than in building. He can cause something to happen when he tears things apart or knocks them to pieces. To do so gives him a sense of power. Left alone with a few blocks he will, without teaching, learn to put them together for himself.

Parents, notably fathers, are inclined to build up things for the baby to knock down. Observing the joy the child gets in doing so, the parent is tempted to go on at this sort of amusement over a period of months, even years. This is not good for the child. It is teaching him the very thing he should not learn. If the child is to acquire the ability to amuse himself he must learn to find enjoyment in construction. If, therefore, the parent is going to help the child at all with blocks, he should help him build.

Without punishment, but with gentle restraining and skillful suggestion the baby can be taught to desist from knocking down the structure, but instead to take the blocks down carefully, one by one.

The usual cubical blocks are not the best. There should be some oblongs, two or three times as long as square on the end. A few strips six inches or longer are also desirable. There should be several pieces of the same dimension. Parents or older children can, with a saw and plane, easily make the best kind of simple building material for the child under three or four.

Frail toys encourage destructiveness. As soon as a toy is broken, either remove it, or repair it at once. A few very substantial toys are better than many fragile ones.

When the child deliberately breaks a toy or dashes it to pieces, better punish him immediately, but be sure first that it was not an accident. Remember that "careful" may not mean the same to the child as it means to you.

Some parents desiring to encourage the child's curiosity, allow him to take toys apart. Some older children, accordingly, remove the wheels from their wagon or tricycle about as soon as they get it. To do so is not good for the child unless he can replace it intact.

Rarely can anyone put such toys together well after dissembling them. The older children will profit from the use of construction sets that are not too hard for them, provided that they are taught to take good care of the parts.

Measurements for a home-made set of blocks may be had without cost by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

If East, who had overcalled 1-Club with 1-Heart, leads the spade 2 against North's 3-No Trumps on this deal, how should North plan to try to take 11 tricks and thereby beat the score probably made by other tournament players in heart contracts?

DRY SILK HOSE

Freshly laundered silk hose will dry quicker if, as soon as it is washed, it is wrapped five minutes in a turkish towel. This removes excess moisture without any twisting or wringing. Then shake out the hose and hang—but not in the sun.

SORORITY GIVES TEA SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Five Pledges And Twelve Guests Honored By Four Gamma Gamma Gamma Chapters At Mansfield-Leland Hotel.

HONORING five pledges and 12 guests, members of four Gamma Gamma Gamma sorority chapters entertained with a tea in the ballroom of the Mansfield-Leland hotel Sunday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock. Forty-five were present for the affair which was sponsored by Beta, Gamma and Delta chapters of Mansfield, and the Epsilon group of Ashland.

Pledges, who will be formally initiated at "The Woods," near Ashland, on Wednesday, are Mrs. Harry Ritz, Mrs. Earl Wiener, Mrs. Lionel Smaltz, Mrs. W. C. Leonard and Mrs. Foster Bell. The following were guests for the afternoon: the Misses Joan Watson, Marjorie Scott, Adeline Wilging, Ethel Mae Bogan, Marjorie Schwein, Marjorie Hale, Jeanette Weiner, Geraldine Fisher, Patricia Stuhldreher and Patricia Oberlander, of Mansfield, Mrs. T. Moore and Mrs. Homer Crone, of Ashland.

In the receiving line were Mrs. James Courtney, sorority president, Mrs. William Mosey, representing Beta chapter Mrs. Robert Broiller, Gamma president, Mrs. Jack Pealer, Delta president, and Mrs. Earl Herrick.

Tea was served by Mrs. Donald Yochheim, of Ashland, and Mrs. Courtney at a table decorated with pastel flowers and white tapers. Each guest was presented with a red rose, the sorority flower, tied with silver ribbon.

Committee in charge of arrangements was comprised of Mrs. Herrick, chairman, Mrs. Dudley Thomas, Mrs. J. B. Kemp, Misses Jane Cunningham and Betty Hammel, of Mansfield, and Mrs. Yochheim, of Ashland.

Sorority Plans Business Meet For January 26

Delta chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma sorority, national honorary sorority, will hold their regular business meeting on Jan. 26. During the meeting sorority bulletin topics will be given by Helen Myers and Margaret Wheeler. Hostesses for this session, which will begin at 7:30 p. m., are Ruth Dunham, Harriet Haynes, Virginia Howard, Marie Hughes and Helen Lorow.

On Feb. 23 sorority members will hold a formal dinner party at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. Social committee members, Emily Palmer, Florence Robison, Leona Snyder, Anita Strauch and Margaret Wheeler, will be hostesses. Helen Persinger, general secretary of Ohio and Western Pennsylvania District of the Y. W. C. A., will speak to the sorority members on "Recreation In National Defense," at their meeting to be held on March 23. Ava Pettit, Gladys McDonald, Leona Miles, Helen Myers and Clara Patton, will be hostesses for this meeting.

Delta Kappa Gamma state president, Miss Edna Morgan, will be the honored guest at the tea to be held April 25 at the Women's Club. Mrs. Daise Middleton will be hostess for the tea. Founder's day will be celebrated by the sorority on May 25. Social committee members are in charge of arrangements.

U. B. Present Class Meeting

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Parkison entertained members of the U. B. Present class of the First United Brethren church at their home recently. Twenty-two members were in attendance. Devotions were led by Mrs. Wayne Roush and Mrs. Russell Indorf. A short business session was conducted by Don Vnasdale.

Games and contests were diversion of the evening. Luncheon was served at the close of the evening by Mrs. Parkison and Mrs. Jesse Robertson. The next regular meeting of the class will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coder.

Margaret Scott, Harold Fleck Become Engaged

With the return of Harold Fleck to his home here after a month's visit on the west coast, friends are learning of the announcement of his engagement to Miss Margaret Louise Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott, of Seville Way, San Mateo, Calif. The Scott family moved from Mansfield to the west coast a year ago. Mr. Scott is associated with Westinghouse in San Francisco.

Guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Scott on Christmas day were friends who had been acquainted in Ohio and now live in California. Announcement of the couple's engagement was made at the dinner. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Scott is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school and attended San Mateo Junior college. Mr. Fleck, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Fleck, R. D 5, was graduated from Kentucky Military Institute at Lyndon, Ky, and is now associated with Westinghouse in this city. He will leave on Jan. 16 to join the infantry as a second lieutenant.

Many Activities Planned For Next Several Months

Among the numerous activities planned by the American Association of University Women for January and the ensuing months are the following: "The History and Geography of Japan in Relation to the War" is the new topic to be undertaken by the Current Problems group of the A. A. U. W., with Miss Margaret Tinsley as leader during the months ahead. On Tuesday, Jan. 13, all members are to invite at least one guest within the membership to the meeting of the group to be held at the home of Miss Margaret DeWitt, 199 Helen avenue. Each member is to bring items of current interest for discussion. On Jan. 27, Mrs. H. L. Knox, 498 Edgewood road, will be hostess for another meeting of the group, at which time "Education and Religion of Japan in Relation to the War" will be discussed.

An all-day Red Cross sewing meeting will be held on Jan. 17 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Greene, 251 Parkway drive, beginning at 9 a. m. Each member is to furnish her own sandwiches for lunch. Coffee and tea will be served by the hostess.

Meeting of the Activity Arts group is scheduled for Jan. 17 to be held in the art rooms of Johnny Appleseed junior high school. Final event for the month will be the mid-year semi-formal dance to be given at the Mansfield-Leland hotel ballroom on Jan. 31. Dancing from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. will be to the music of Nels Blocker's orchestra. Door prize will be awarded at 11 o'clock. Committee in charge of arrangements is comprised of Miriam Neese, general chairman, Miss DeWitt, Mrs. E. P. Gaar, Mrs. L. A. Hautzenroeder, Mrs. V. A. Simpson, Mrs. Grant Ward, Mrs. Clifford Faust, Mrs. Homer Swift, and Adeline McCready.

On Feb. 3, the branch will have a guest meeting at the Congregational church. Dinner will be served at 6:15 p. m. and the program will begin at 7:30 o'clock. George A. Washburne will present "Behind Contemporary History." Mrs. Kenneth Bu[illegible] will be hostess for a benefit bridge party to be held at 7:30 p. m. on Feb. 10. Another dinner-meeting is scheduled to take place at the Congregational church on March 3. There will be a style show sponsored by the M. O'Neil company and the program subject will be "The Effect of War on American Fashion."

April meeting date is the seventh. At that time a party will be given at the Mansfield-Leland hotel with Mrs. J. F. McLean as chairman. Dinner will be served at the Women's club at 6:15 p. m. on May 5. Program, which will begin at 7:30 o'clock, will be entitled "The Arts and Crafts of Western Reserve" with Mrs. Earl Knittle as chairman.

Miss Emma Waring and Mrs. R. A. Rowlands will be co-chairmen for a tea to be given on May 26 for senior girls. Time and place will be announced later.

Cheated Wife Urged to Keep Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"How could he have forgotten our beautiful and wonderful love?"

I am quoting from a letter received in my mail a day or two ago from an agonized wife whose husband has been unfaithful to her. She said:

"How could he, who seemed to adore me, become the lover of a silly girl? And afterward coolly tell me that the whole wretched affair is blotted out and that we can start all over again.

"I am 35 years old and we have a dear little girl and boy. I have loved my husband devotedly and I supposed he returned that love. I still love him.

"How about divorce? The mere thought of living without him and of seeing someone else in my place nearly kills me. Should I accept the statements he now makes and make a pretense of continuing the life he has ruined? Either course seems to me impossible.

"Some of my friends tell me to ignore my tragedy, or even to profit by it. They tell me almost any concession can be won from a husband in a case like mine.

"But all I want is my dear one's love. I don't want to bargain for a new car or a trip to Florida, or anything else. If I only knew I could be sure of his love."

She signs herself "Wretchedly Unhappy."

To a woman in this plight—sensitive, idealistic, romantic, and deeply wounded—almost any advice is unpalatable. Yet here is mine, offered with a clear conscience:

Keep your husband. Hold tight to your marriage. Patch up the break in your life.

I don't say this merely because you have two children, although they are seriously to be considered. Children shouldn't be deprived of a father if there's any help for it.

I urge it because I think you still have a chance for happiness. This may be hard for a woman to understand, but I assure you it is possible for a man to be guilty of a temporary infidelity without losing or perhaps even impairing his love for his wife.

Another thing—you don't know just how this affair of his started. Perhaps the girl was almost entirely to blame. Your husband lost his head for the time being, and now that he's recovered it, he heartily wishes the thing had never taken place and hopes you will help him forget it.

I'm not excusing him. I'm merely pointing out that he may not have been a monster at all—just a weak human being—and that deep down in his heart the girl who tempted him has never displaced you for a moment.

You probably would never have acted as he has acted. But men are different. You might as well admit it. Now that he has whole-heartedly returned to you, I suggest you don't reproach him any more, or even allow yourself to act other than naturally.

Have a good deal of company for a while. That will make it easier. It is also just as well to let your husband see how much your friends value you. Without withdrawing your love from him, which you can't do and shouldn't do, indicate to him that you are not solely dependent on his affection.

Futhermore, don't allow yourself to have red eyelids or a catch in your voice. Have your hair waved, wear pretty dresses, and accept all the attentions that your repentant husband offers. This is much better than staging a continuous domestic tragedy.

I suspect that in a year from now your present trouble will seem as unreal as nightmare. Believe me, thousands of women have followed the course that I'm counselling—and without regretting it.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

Your kitchen is neat as a pin—but how about your apron? This Marian Martin design, Pattern 9887, looks fresh-as-a-daisy and is easy to stitch up quickly with the step-by-step Sew Chart. It's easy to don quickly, too,—the back bodice is cut all in-one so you can slip the apron over your head and tie it in back. In front, that long center panel is gracefully shaped to give you a narrower waistline ...and it may have two different necklines, a square or a pointed one. This same panel may be made of contrast together with the back bodice. Bows or buttons are optional, and ruffling or ric-rac edging.

Pattern 9887 may be ordered only in sizes small (34-36), medium (38-40), large (42-44), and extra large (46-48). Small size requires 2⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and 3¼ yards ric-rac.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your Size, Name, Address, and Style Number.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary lifted her head spiritedly and her eyes, as they met mine, were filled with eager speculation.

"You'll not only have to give me the cards," she said, "but outline just how I'm going to play them. I don't mind telling you that I never was more jittery in my life than at this prospect of going over to see Noel, when he's laid down the law that he'll hear nothing whatever about Stephen Redfield. I haven't the slightest idea of what I'm going to say to him, and I'm scared to tears about what he's likely to say to me."

"You needn't be," I told her. "In the first place, I don't think you listened very carefully while I told you what Noel said"

"I did so," she answered childishly. "But I guess I couldn't see the woods for the trees—or the trees for the woods, whichever it is—at that, because I was so obsessed by the thought of the poor boy's suffering. But I'm all ears now."

Things To Remember.

"There are two things you must remember," I repeated. "One is that not by word or look are you to remind Noel of Redfield or your plans for—interviewing him, shall we say?

"That's a good Greek word for it," she said, with the gamin grin which generally flashes across her face at some point in her conversation, no matter how serious.

"And I shall obey you implicitly. As far as my ever-loving husband will hear from me, Steve was hanged yesterday, and I didn't even attend the funeral."

"See that you keep that in mind," I told her, smiling in spite of myself. "Now the second thing I'd like you to consider is this, Noel said: 'Until this is over, I shall make no engagements for or with her myself. But I shall always be at her service if she wishes to go anywhere' "

"I get you," she said. "You think it would be a nice gesture if I went over to our apartment, and told Noel that I was lonesome and bored, and wished he'd take me out for the afternoon until theater time, which would include going out to dinner."

"That is what I was going to suggest," I said, "only—"I hesitated.

"You mean your father might want me to go out with Steve for dinner tonight, if I could wangle it?"

"He might," I said. Then I put a quick question.

"What time of day do you usually make those excursions with Steve to that little foreign restaurant?"

"Usually in the afternoon, when there isn't a matinee," she rejoined. "We go down for tea—Steve is most awfully, awfully English you know—but once in a while we go for dinner; never after the theater at night. Little Stevie has thrown out hints several times that it might be amusing down here toward midnight, which I've always side-stepped."

"I'll be responsible to my father, Mary," I said.

"But what about this humble pie that he wants me to eat for Steve, to get him back into good humor?" she asked, with a sudden raucous note in her voice. "If he should stage that for some time this afternoon, it would shoot my outing with Noel into a cocked hat. Besides, Noel couldn't help guessing the reason for the interruption, and that would be—"

"Yes, I know," I said, "but you haven't the slightest reason for uneasiness. Remember, I am to see Redfield before you do, and I shall maneuver things so you will see him at the theater tonight for the first time since your disagreement. How will that do?"

Tasty Ways To Serve Oysters

By BETSY NEWMAN

I seem to harp somewhat on the succulent oyster as an aid to home cooks. Maybe it is because I have been neglecting the oyster in my home menus and keep reminding myself of their goodness and excellent food values. Scalloped oysters are a favorite, and I'll give you a recipe for them, or you might like oyster patties for a change.

Today's Menu.

Scalloped Oysters or Oyster Patties.
Stewed Tomatoes Glazed Carrots
Celery Pickles
Cherry Charlotte
Coffee or Substitute

* * *

Scalloped Oysters.

1 qt. Oysters — Salt, pepper
Dry bread or cracker crumbs — Milk
1 tbsp. butter

Put oysters in layers in buttered baking dish, alternating with layers of the bread or cracker crumbs seasoning each layer to taste. When dish is filed, add strained oyster liquor and sufficient milk to moisten Cover top with crumbs and 1 tablespoon butter in bits, and bake ½ hour in hot oven

* * *

Oyster Patties.

1 pt. mashed potatoes — ½ tsp. minced onion
1 egg, beaten — 1 pt. oysters

Add beaten egg and onion to mashed potatoes and form into cakes. Split cakes with sharp knife, lay 2 or 3 oysters on lower part of each and replace top. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) until patties are brown, and serve garnished with parsley or watercress.

* * *

Cherry Charlotte.

2 tbsps. plain gelatin — ⅛ cp. sugar
½ cp. cold water — 2 egg whites
1 No. 2 can sour pitted cherries and juice — 6 to 10 lady fingers, vanilla wafers or sponge cake strips
⅔ cp. sugar
2 egg yolks — 1 cp. whipping cream
1tbsp. lemon juice.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Combine in double boiler the ⅔ cup sugar, cherry juice, slightly beaten egg yolks and lemon juice, and cook until slightly thickened. Add gelatin and cherries, remove from heat and chill until thickened, but not stiff. Fold in egg whites beaten with ¼ cup sugar; also the whipped cream. Line a mold or pan with lady fingers and fill with gelatin mixture. Chill thoroughly, and serve garnished with some of the cherries reserved for the purpose. Serves 6 to 8. Try it out on the family and then remember it when Washington's birthday rolls around.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Excellent augury for progress and highly productive effort is read from this day's lunar transits. It should be a propitious time to make a swift start with new and ambitious projects, particularly if they involve change, travel, correspondence, dealing with lawyers, agencies and the public. The latter contact should be notably successful and gratifying.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and progressive year, with large and important new projects bringing unexpected results. This applies especially to all pertaining to travel, writings, litigation, agencies and communications of any nature, as well as business and professional aims. Public, community and group relations should flourish and bring prestige. It would be well not to let good judgment be overruled by over-enthusiasm.

Simple Clothes Call for a Good Figure

By MME. QUI VIVE

Befitting the times and the numerous activities of women, fashions are simple and practical. That, you will allow, is all to the good. There's not much danger of overdressing; overdressing is responsible for most of the frumpy ones we see. Those girls just don't know when they've got on enough dry goods, so they add a fussy bow, put doodads on their bodices. Smart ladies know that they themselves should dominate their attire, never let duds overshadow them.

Simple clothes call for good figures. They don't disguise defects of shape, as do fussier models. So, the pretty dollies who are built like a stalk of asparagus are busy trying to get busty. She who had indulged too freely in the good things of the table is seeking means and ways of cutting down measurements. Even those persons whose proportions are correct must mind their meals so that they stay that way.

The standard is what it should be—a firm, high bust, a neat waist line, normal hips. The physical structure is one of rounded slenderness. Ankles and wrists trim. No sharp elbows. Legs tapering gracefully from thigh to knee with no bumps any place. Blessed with a silhouette that matches this description, a girl is marching along the beauty road.

A well-fitted foundation garment, one that tucks the hips back and under, lifts the breasts and flattens the tummy, is a reminder of the need of good posture. You can't fold up very well when you are neatly packed in a silken cylinder. If you did do that you'd be betraying the trust of your corsetiere, letting her down.

How you feel has a lot to do with how you look, as we all know through contact with the lady in the looking glass. The mental state affects the body. The lazy, selfish woman, demanding attentions from every member of the family, takes on flesh She doesn't move around enough to keep fat cells from lighting on her. The high-strung, nervous, over-active woman who expects everybody to work as hard as she does keeps down to skin and bone.

The formula for the good figure consists of wise eating, plenty of exercise, a balance of work and relaxation, mental hygiene. If one feels tip-top one is likely to display the brisk step, a body carried with splendor.

Easy-to-Make Wholesome Cakes

It's so easy for meals to get into a rut. But it's easy enough to pull them out, and January is an awfully good time to do it. A new cake here, a different salad there and meals can't help getting a fresh lift.

Sometimes, the new recipe proves so popular that in no time at all, it becomes an old standby. That is probably what will happen to these recipes for two easy-to-make, wholesome cakes. They will earn the space they take up in your recipe file.

Molasses Cocoanut Cake.

½ cup shortening
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg
1 cup pure New Orleans molasses
2½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup milk
1 can moist cocoanut, cut with scissors

Cream together sugar and shortening; add egg and beat in well. Mix in molasses. Sift together dry ingredients, and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add cocoanut. Bake in greased and floured loaf pan 8x8x2 in moderate oven (350° F.) 45 minutes.

Spicy Crumb Cake.

1¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons ginger
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup sugar
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
¼ cup pure New Orleans molasses
½ cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda

Mix and sift flour, spices, baking powder and sugar. Cut in the butter. When mixture is like coarse meal, remove ½ cup. Beat eggs and combine with molasses, then add buttermilk with which soda has been thoroughly mixed. Combine dry and liquid ingredients. Pour mixture into 8" square or 9" round greased pan and sprinkle the reserved ½ cup of crumbled mixture over top. Bake in a moderate over of 350° F. for 40 minutes. Serve warm or cold.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

PROTECT YOURSELF, TOO

Just as an army engaged in an offensive must protect its flanks from counter-attack, so must a bridge player, bent on an offensive operation, think of two things. One of them is finding enough trick takers for his own purposes. The other is prevention of trick taking by the opponents, which may give them so many tricks there will not be enough left for him, even if he has sufficient trick takers. That is why a bidder must sometimes choose No Trumps for a contract instead of a suit, as defensive ruffs may threaten his project, or the suit chosen for trump may not "break."

1 ♠	1 ♥	2 ♠	3 ♥
4 ♥	Pass	5 ♦	5 ♥
7 ♦	7 ♥	Pass	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	7 NT

That was a brilliant bid by North, who was Herbert J. Gerst, of Norfolk, Va., the chairman who has set a goal of $150,000 for his state in the Bridge-for-Ambulances campaign, headed nationally by this writer, and in no time put his home city more than 60 per cent beyond its quota of $20,000. He bid and played this deal in the national championships at Richmond.

When West stuck in that sacrifice bid of 7-Hearts, Mr. Gerst waited to see if his partner wanted to double it, making a very fine forcing pass. When his partner decided a double of the sacrifice would not produce as many points as the grand slam, and bid 7-Spades, Mr. Gerst put on his thinking cap. After plenty of study, he realized the side had too good a fit in the side suit of diamonds, and that the opening lead might produce a defensive ruff, through finding the partner of the leader blank.

He also realized that, with fitting suits, there ought to be 13 tricks in the deal if either of the two suits would break fortuitously. Maybe spades would break badly, maybe diamonds would. But playing it at suit would necessitate a good break in the suit chosen. At No Trumps either suit, breaking right, should be enough. As it turned out, the 7-Spades could not be made. Other pairs played at that and were set. But his bid enabled his side to gain the maximum possible result, getting six tricks in diamonds, three in clubs, one in hearts and three in spades.

Teaching The Baby To Build

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

The child from one to two years of age is more interested in destroying than in building. He can cause something to happen when he tears things apart or knocks them to pieces. To do so gives him a sense of power. Left alone with a few blocks he will, without teaching, learn to put them together for himself.

Parents, notably fathers, are inclined to build up things for the baby to knock down. Observing the joy the child gets in doing so, the parent is tempted to go on at this sort of amusement over a period of months, even years. This is not good for the child. It is teaching him the very thing he should not learn. If the child is to acquire the ability to amuse himself he must learn to find enjoyment in construction. If, therefore, the parent is going to help the child at all with blocks, he should help him build.

Without punishment, but with gentle restraining and skillful suggestion the baby can be taught to desist from knocking down the structure, but instead to take the blocks down carefully, one by one.

The usual cubical blocks are not the best. There should be some oblongs, two or three times as long as square on the end. A few strips six inches or longer are also desirable. There should be several pieces of the same dimension. Parents or older children can, with a saw and plane, easily make the best kind of simple building material for the child under three or four.

Frail toys enecourage destructiveness. As soon as a toy is broken, either remove it, or repair it at once. A few very substantial toys are better than many fragile ones.

When the child deliberately breaks a toy or dashes it to pieces, better punish him immediately, but be sure first that it was not an accident. Remember that "careful" may not mean the same to the child as it means to you.

Some parents desiring to encourage the child's curiosity, allow him to take toys apart. Some older children, accordingly, remove the wheels from their wagon or tricycle about as soon as they get it. To do so is not good for the child unless he can replace it intact.

Rarely can anyone put such toys together well after dissembling them. The older children will profit from the use of construction sets that are not too hard for them, provided that they are taught to take good care of the parts.

Measurements for a home-made set of blocks may be had without cost by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Tomorrow's Problem.

If East, who had overcalled 1-Club with 1-Heart, leads the spade 2 against North's 3-No Trumps on this deal, how should North plan to try to take 11 tricks and thereby beat the score probably made by other tournament players in heart contracts?

Why Depend Upon a Chance Recommendation?

The recommendation of some well-meaning but misinformed person is too often the basis upon which a funeral director is selected.

The best guide is to know something about the funeral services that are available in this community. To that end we invite inquiry, and inspection of our Funeral Home as well as other facilities.

Those who have investigated find this funeral service unusually well equipped, and our prices no higher than they would pay elsewhere.

Uncertain Destiny + + + + + +

By Betty Webb

CHAPTER VI

A lamp had been left burning, and by its dim light Linda found her way to the guest room where Sally lay sleeping peacefully. But beside her, Linda turned and tossed until the first rays of the sun touched the room. Each time she closed her eyes it was to see again a vision of Greg Hollister smiling down at her—that intimate, fleeting smile; to hear again his low, caressing voice.

"Perhaps," she whispered half-hopefully, half-fearfully, "I'll have forgotten all this by morning . . ." But inwardly Linda knew she had known no moonlight infatuation. There had been something compelling in Greg's manner. Something that had made her forget completely her sweetheart in Prairievale. Even now, Kyle seemed a shadowy figure in her dim past, and only Greg was vital, important. Only Greg mattered. "So Diane's premonition was right," Linda told herself. "I am a new person. I've just begun to live!"

When morning came, Linda still moved in a happy glow, thrilled by the remembrance of Greg Hollister's warm eyes and his voice.

She was scarcely aware that Diane and Sally were discussing the previous evening's activities as they dressed, until Diane said: "I saw you leave the reception quite early with Greg Hollister. Where did you go?"

Linda was reluctant to share the secret of her new-found happiness until she had possessed it a little longer. "Oh, just around," she said. "We danced at several places." She did not mention the fact that Greg had driven up the Lakeshore drive and parked where Linda might watch moonlight rippling over Lake Michigan, and they had sat for two hours—talking.

Greg had told her a little about his work as chemical engineer for a large rubber company, and Linda had confessed her engagement to Kyle.

"I should have known I couldn't find someone like you unattached," Greg had declared ruefully.

Sally shattered Linda's reverie. "Hey, snap out of it! Diane insists on taking us to breakfast downtown, and we're waiting on you."

Linda stared ruefully at her reflection in the mirror. The familiar black hat looked almost comic now, atop her new hairdo, and Diane, seeing and understanding the reason for her distress, brought forth a tiny hat covered with soft, colorful velvet ribbons.

"Wear this," she commanded adjusting it at the prescribed angle despite Linda's protest. "You can wear it this morning and return it before you leave for home. That," she said truthfully, "would be unappreciated in Prairievale, even though it is a Paris model."

The morning passed almost too quickly. Breakfast consisted mainly of coffee and a review of the previous evening's activities, and then there was a frantic dash back to the apartment.

"Twenty minutes until train time," Sally wailed. "We'll never make it!" Yet scarcely ten minutes later they were out of the apartment in a cab, with Diane breathless from haste.

"And to think I've scarcely seen you," she complained as the cab careened around curves and through crowded areas en route to the station.

Standing on a bottom step before the train pulled out of the station, Linda turned to her hostess. How can I ever thank you enough for all you've done for me?"

"I had nothing to do with your success," Diane retorted spiritedly. "Whenever you tire sufficiently of Prairievale, come and visit me."

"Tire—of Prairievale?"

Diane nodded wisely. "You will, Linda. You were never meant to bury yourself in that smug little town; but be sure, when you do want to break away, that is isn't too late."

When the train began moving and Diane was gone, Linda stood digesting the other girl's words. What did Diane mean—"make sure it isn't too late."

The return trip was uneventful. Linda was so absorbed in her blissful dream that time passed rapidly. If Sally was aware of any difference in the manner of her companion, she gave no sign.

Dusk was falling and lights from scattered farm houses flickered bravely as the train rushed on. Then, with a sigh, Sally tossed her book aside and announced:

"Ten miles more and we're home. Now are you sorry you went with me?"

"Oh, no!" Linda was radiant. "I had a wonderful time."

"And now you're back to settle down in Prairievale, and tomorrow is Monday and that means pounding a typewriter again." Sally spoke with emphasis, her bright eyes on the other girl. If she expected some outward sign of discontent or rebellion on Linda's part, she was disappointed.

"It was a lovely wedding, wasn't it?" Linda murmured wistfully.

"Ideal. Ted Cummings (Betty's husband) was very nice."

"Yes." Linda stared through the window with unseeing eyes, remembering each detail of the solemn ceremony. Suddenly she leaned forward, her pretty face intent.

"Sally, when you first met Hugh, how did you feel?"

Sally had sensed that something was troubling Linda. Now she knew.

"Like kicking, biting and scratching," she answered cheerfully. "We were rivals in everything we did. Sworn enemies to death."

Linda settled back, disgruntled. "That's scarcely a satisfactory reply."

"Neither was Hugh—satisfactory, I mean," remarked her companion. "You know, I met him when I was home from school for the summer, and on our first date I gave him a terrific walloping at tennis. It went on like that for weeks." She grinned. "Sometimes I think we've never gotten beyond the battling stage."

"Nonsense!" Linda was indignant. "You're the happiest couple in Prairievale."

"Yes, we are, happy," Sally agreed soberly. "I never knew life could contain as much happiness for me. Hugh is the sweetest, most generous man in the world."

"But why shouldn't he be?" demanded Linda. "He has an excellent position. His father is wealthy and so is yours. You've never had to skimp and save and struggle to get by. That makes a difference, you know. It's less wearing on the disposition."

"I don't think I could feel any differently toward Hugh." Sally answered gravely, "if he hadn't a penny to his name."

Linda frowned. This wasn't what she had wanted the other girl to say, although she knew Sally's conviction was a natural. But had she (Linda) honestly ever felt that way? Was she so much in love with Kyle that nothing else mattered?

"I—don't know," she murmured wistfully. "Naturally I love Kyle—and I want to be his wife. But being poor, and—and having to do without the things I've always wanted, takes away the — the thrill."

She paused for breath. After scrutinizing her carefully, Sally uttered the words that Linda had been trying to avoid in her own thoughts. Words that made the girl move uneasily and remain silent and moody until they had reached their destination.

"You wouldn't," Sally asked simply and shrewdly, "be trying to convince yourself?"

The sight of Kyle, standing patiently on the station platform, made Linda shiver a little. He looked so—she groped for words—so placid, stolid, as though welcoming her back was commonplace. For no apparent reason, Linda remembered her farewell to Greg Hollister, and scolded herself for being unfair to Kyle Norman.

Sally, preceding her off the train, was caught in a bear-hug by her husband, and kissed so violently that her hat tumbled to the ground. This caused the conductor no end of amusement, but the sight wrenched Linda's heart. Why, she wondered desperately, must she continually compare Kyle with other men and find him lacking in the qualities she most admired?

"Hello, Linda," Kyle had reached her now and Linda shrank back slightly. If Kyle should attempt to kiss her—but no, he was picking up her bag, his manner completely businesslike.

"I suppose you had a good time?"

"Oh, yes. Wonderful."

"That's nice."

How ordinary this is, Linda thought, how polite we are! Kyle isn't really interested in hearnig about my trip, and I don't want to tell him.

She heard her name called and paused, as Hugh Barnes, on the run, caught up with them.

"Since this is rather an occasion," he began, "I thought maybe we four could celebrate by having dinner together, out at our place. After all, Kyle and I want to hear about your little spree, don't we, old man?"

Linda's eyes sparkled. She turned to Kyle, her face glowing expectantly. "I think that would be grand." She caught Kyle's hand. "Shall we, dear?"

Kyle glanced at Hugh Barnes. Almost rudely he said, "Thanks, Mr. Barnes, but I think Linda's mother has dinner waiting."

There was a moment of silence while Linda stared at Hugh pleadingly. Kyle's tone had been almost insulting, and now he was climbing into the car, starting the motor without further ado.

Hugh Barnes saw the sparkle die in Linda's eyes. In the raw November wind she shivered a little. "I—I'm very sorry, too, Hugh, but I can't keep mother in suspense, I guess. But before we go, I want you to know how wonderful Sally was to me. I—I'm so terribly happy that I went to Chicago. I'll never forget it."

Sally, seeing the effort it took for Linda to hold back tears, said airily, "Skip the bouquets, darling. It was fun to be with you." She pressed Linda's hand. "We'll get together soon—the four of us. Okay?"

"Okay," Linda replied.

"It—it wasn't very polite of you," she said mildly to Kyle as the small car sped away from the station, "to be so brusque with Hugh when he was being kind and good-natured. After all, they are my friends—"

"Friends!" Kyle muttered angrily. "They're not our sort, Linda. Just a couple of big-wigs trying to patronize the little girl from the other side of the tracks."

Linda felt a surge of anger. What right had Kyle to criticize her friends—to condemn her as being unfit to mingle with society? She opened her mouth to protest furiously, and then held back the bitter words. What good would it do to quarrel—now?

Kyle was humming under his breath. Linda's head ached, and she was aware now that the magic week-end was over. Once more living was commonplace and drab. Even Sally and Hugh might have been only characters in an exciting novel; their gay, happy mode of life merely her own dream.

She was suddenly conscious that Kyle's humdrum monologue had broken off, and he was staring at her.

"Sa-ay," he exclaimed. "What's that thing you've got on your head?"

Linda's last, shining air castle tumbled in ruins. Swiftly her hand went up to snatch Diane's gay, be-ribboned offender from her hair. So Diane had been right, after all, in saying the little hat would be unappreciated in Prairievale.

"It's just a very silly little hat that belongs to Diane," she explained wearily. "I'll send it back, tomorrow."

Former Comrade Of 'Billy the Kid' Dies at 85

ROSWELL, N. M.—(INS)—The West lost its last link with one of the most stirring chapters in pioneer history recently in the death of George W. Coe, comrade of "Billy the Kid" and sole survivor of the bloody Lincoln county cattle war.

The veteran rancher died at Roswell at the age of 85 following an attack of pneumonia. He had been ill about a week.

Coe, a member of the powerful McSween faction during the Lincoln county war (1876-1878) sided with "Billy the Kid" (William H. Bonney) and was associated with the notorious outlaw during many of his daring escapades.

After the "Kid" was shot to death by Sheriff Pat Garrett to bring the war to a close, Coe laid down his arms at the request of Territorial Governor Lew Wallace, famed author of "Ben Hur," and had lived in peace at his Glencoe, N. M., home ever since.

He is survived by two children, 20 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

FLY, VIA AIR EXPRESS

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(U.P.)—Officials of the San Diego zoo claim the distinction of owning the only "flying" penguins known to man. Penguins, of course, are flightless birds, but the four in the local zoo flew across the country via air express.

THEATERS

Theatrical Story.

Dealing with the hundreds of youngsters who each year invade Broadway looking for a "break" on the stage, "Babes On Broadway," the current Ohio attraction, stars Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in a melange of singing and dancing sprinkled with impersonations ranging from Harry Lauder to Carmen Miranda. Mickey does Carmen Miranda, in a number coached by the Brazilian "bombshell" herself while Judy impersonates Blanche Ring and Fay Templeton, two headliners of yesteryear. Fay Bainter and Virginia Weidler are in the cast while Alexander Woollcott appears in the prologue.

Sprightly Comedy.

Rolling up one ludicrous situation after the other, "Skylark," co-starring Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland and Brian Aherne, continues its merry way at the Madison. The picture presents Miss Colbert as a modern wife who does a little "skylarking" with a handsome bachelor while her husband is occupied with big business. Milland plays the husband and Aherne, the bachelor. Binnie Barnes and Walter Abel are in the cast. The heroic story of a police officer who tries to abolish crime by showing youthful leaders there is a place for them in good society is set forth in "Mob Town," the second picture with Dick Foran.

Romantic Thriller.

"Honky Tonk," the Clark Gable-Lana Turner romantic thriller cast, "Texas," with Glen Ford, Trevor and Frank Morgan in the supporting cast. "The Deadly Game," with Charles Farrell and June Lang is the second attraction.

Convention Farce.

The hectic goings-on at a convention hotel are pictured in "Three Girls About Town," the Park attraction featuring Joan Blondell, Binnie Barnes and Janet Blair. Robert Benchley plays a bewildered hotel manager and John Howard, a reporter bent on getting the chief hostess fired so she will have to marry him. Eric Blore and Una O'Conner are also cast. "Texas," with Glen Ford, William Holden and Claire Trevor, shares the bill.

Dietrich Picture.

WORRY CEASES

Watchman Reserves Casket and Purchases Burial Lot.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— George Scriver, 79-year-old watchman, was free of a worry which had long plagued him because he has an important piece of ground which he had been unable to obtain before.

Scriver received $889.91 from his employer for back wages, which were found due him under the fair labor standards act. Upon receiving his check, Scriver reserved a casket and purchased a burial lot in a cemetery. "Now," he said, "I don't have to worry. This has been on my mind for a long time, and I just couldn't seem to get enough ahead to take care of it."

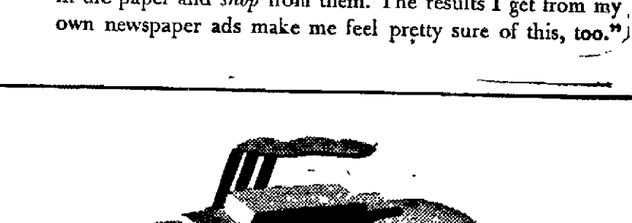
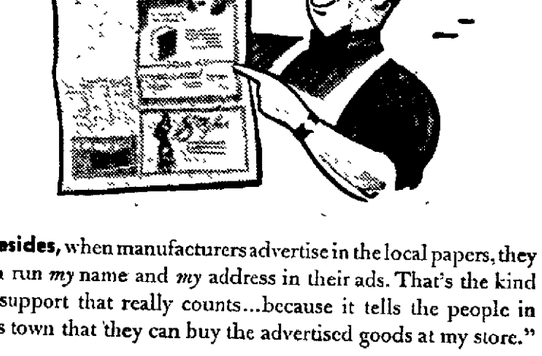
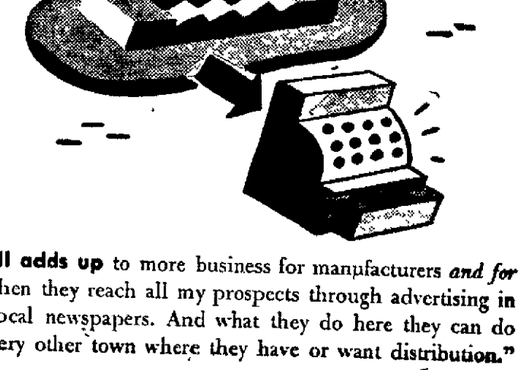
"What's in it for ME?"



"When a manufacturer plans an advertising campaign the main thing I'm interested in is: What's in it for ME? And I have some definite ideas about the kind of advertising that does me the most good."



1. "Here's how I see it: I've been running this cash register long enough to understand pretty well how advertising works ...and how newspaper advertising by the manufacturer brings in customers and rings up sales for me."



2. "From what my customers tell me, just about everybody reads the daily paper. More than that, they look for the ads in the paper and shop from them. The results I get from my own newspaper ads make me feel pretty sure of this, too."

3. "Besides, when manufacturers advertise in the local papers, they can run my name and my address in their ads. That's the kind of support that really counts...because it tells the people in this town that they can buy the advertised goods at my store."

4. "It all adds up to more business for manufacturers and for me when they reach all my prospects through advertising in the local newspapers. And what they do here they can do in every other town where they have or want distribution."

Small wonder this retailer is successful: he knows what's in it for him when newspaper advertising goes to work in his town. He knows that manufacturers produce more sales for their retailers...and themselves...when they advertise in local newspapers.

GEN. JOHNSON: Draft Price Ceilings On Used Tires

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Some days ago this column asked in a faint inquiring voice about what is going to happen to the rubber plantations of Malaya and the Indies if the Japs extend their push.

The tin mines can be put out of commission for a few months. The oil wells can be rendered useless, it is said, for a year. If the Japs have modern drilling and finishing equipment, I doubt if the wells can be put out for so long.

Gen. Johnson.

But rubber is different. It takes six years for the trees to bear — at least for the present methods of manufacture. The area under threat or attack produces more than 95 per cent of all the crude rubber in the world.

My point was that if the Japs prevail and these plantations are not destroyed, they and the Nazis will have have all the rubber there is.

The column conjectured that in view of the fact that these properties are controlled by very rich and powerful British, Dutch and American private interests their destruction may be successfully opposed by our own friends and allies. My conclusion from all this is that we should be exerting every effort regardless of cost to replace Malayan rubber by the products of our own ingenuity and that we were not doing that.

Since then there have been several discussions in the press about how awful it would be to deprive the whole world of rubber for years to gain a temporary war advantage, and a rather cavalier dismissal of any suggested substitute by saying "It can't be done."

Taking the first point first: Suppose the Japs do occupy these areas and we have not destroyed the rubber. Suppose then we recapture them (as we are assured that we shall) what are the re-treating Japs going to do about those trees?

Will they feel our squeamishness about not destroying them in the ground that it would deprive the innocent world of rubber for a number of years? Horsefeathers!

If those plantations are lost to our enemies intact and then again threatened by us, they will be lost to the world alike whether we do the destroying or they do it.

We are talking about one of the greatest stakes at hazard in this war. Sooner or later we have got to have rubber and we normally use 65 per cent of it. If the Japs do get those plantations unimpaired, they must find an outlet. We are the only such market there is. Yet circumstances can hardly be imagined in which we would begin "trading with the enemy," no matter how dire our need may become.

It is hard to approach the problem from any angle without arriving at a conclusion that we must find, among our many promising scientific products, some substitute for rubber. The rubber restrictions thus far imposed will go far to upset our economy, but, in a long war, they would not begin to solve this problem.

It is not enough to say: "It can't be done." During the World war there was a universal slogan: "It can't be done, but here it is." It would be good to revive that now.

Rubber production was moved from its native place, Brazil, for one reason only. It was that, like the production of flax, it requires a very large amount of hand labor. Nowhere in America was there such a supply of coolie labor—efficient labor—working for a few cents a day such as exists on the other half of the globe.

If there is any capitalist objection to moving the production of rubber back again to the Americas, it will be on this score. It may not be so advanced in words but that will be the real resaon.

This is no fly-by-night question to be dismissed with a word. It involves a principal reason for our getting into the war all over the world. The rapid trend of events have recently brought it luridly into the foreground. The situation is acute and there is no time for thumb-twiddling.

Let us know, and know now, what is going to be done about the rubber trees.

SEE EXCISE TAX AS SUBSTITUTE FOR SALES LEVY

Congress Leaders Continue Work on $7,000,000,000 Taxation Program.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A strong move developed in congress today to substitute a general manufacturers' excise tax for a sales levy with low cost food and clothing exempted, as work continued on the $7,000,000,000 war tax bill.

While legislative tax writers still dissatisfied with treasury recommendations to date, leaders were agreed that eventually the major proposals probably will be accepted in one form or another.

These would include a withholding tax levied on the nation's payroll—a method of collecting income taxes at the source—lowered income tax exemptions to bring in millions of new direct taxpayers, and a general increase all along the line in existing levies.

While the ultimate effect on the paying public of a general manufacturers' excise tax and a sales tax would be much the same—except that the former is a so-called "hidden" levy which usually results in a price rise and the latter is a direct tax—many congressmen favored imposing the tax at the source.

"A manufacturers' excise tax is easier to administer, since collection is made at the source and the public doesn't have to add a penny or so to all small purchases," Rep. Disney (D.), Okla., a member of the ways and means committee, explained.

Disney also advocated exempting low cost food and clothing from such a levy, but said he believed it should be imposed on luxury foods and expensive clothing.

The treasury, it was reported, has failed to recommend either a sales tax or a general excise levy, although it does advocate broadening of existing excise taxes and increasing of rates.

On the whole congressmen feel, however, that some such tax will be necessary before the requested $7,000,000,000 can be raised.

Further conferences between leaders and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau are scheduled for later in the week, from which it is hoped that details can be worked out.

In addition to the $7,000,000,000 in general revenue, President Roosevelt in his budget message also asked for $2,000,000,000 more in social security taxes.

Mansfield police will count noses in the future before making hunts for prowlers. Police were called out three times early yesterday morning to investigate reports of prowlers. Two of the calls came from the vicinity of Lida street and Vale avenue. No prowler was found in either case. A third call came from near Harker and Grant streets. Patrolmen from a police cruiser crept up on the "suspect" and apprehended him, only to find a brother policeman, investigating a fourth prowler report.

Members of the new January term county petit jury braved the snow this morning to go to the courthouse for their first session which lasted less than 30 minutes. All the jurors had to do was sign a verdict to make the settlement of a case official. The action contested the will of the late Mrs. Ella Glasgow. Principals in the case agreed before the jury session to let the will stand and the jurors added their approval. There is no other business on the Jury's calendar until Thursday morning.

OPA SETS UP MAXIMUMS ON ALL RETREADS

Henderson Says Action Will Protect Public From Exploitation.

(By International News Service)

WASHINCTON—Price Administrator Leon Henderson worked today on a price ceiling for used auto tires, after setting a maximum price schedule for "retreadable" and retreated or recapped tires.

Henderson declared that with the ban on sale of new tires, profiteering of "serious proportions" has developed in the sale of used tires and said that the price ceiling will be fixed in the near future to protect the public from "exploitation."

Meanwhile, members of the house small business committee today planned to seek remedies for the nation's 44,000 automobile dealers and their half-million employes as a seven-man industry-labor board was named to convert the auto industry to full wartime production.

Culminating a dispute between management and labor representatives of the industry over the makeup of the auto committee, which is purely advisory, the OPM appointed Cyrus Ching, vice president of the U. S. Rubber company, as chairman of the group.

In addition to Ching, the committee consists of three members representing management and three labor members.

Selection of Ching as head of the group was viewed as a victory for management over labor's demands for equal authority in directing conversion of the vast automobile industry.

The schedule announced by Henderson for old tire carcasses worth retreading, and retreads for passenger cars, trucks, buses, agricultural implements, industrial machines, motorcycles and other vehicles of common use, will go into effect next Monday.

The maximum prices allowed for the 6:00x16 passenger car tires—the most commonly used—are $1.50 for old tire carcasses, $7.50 for the best retread job and $9 for a retread tire. The ceiling for the next best job is $6.45 and $7.95 for a retread. Prices vary for the other sizes.

Sales of new tires for civilian use was stopped by the OPA Dec. 11. When the regular ceiling is established, maximum prices will prevail on sales of tires at every stage of condition and use.

Henderson said that the government "cannot permit price to determine who can afford and who cannot afford to buy second-hand tires in this time of war."

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

I think one of the most interesting phases of modern life, aside from current history and world fairs, is Gene Tierney. The most astonishing thing about her is that a writer like myself can sit down "Gene Tierney" and not further identification be sure that you know who she is probably, indeed, have a very good mental picture of her just as if I had said "Cordell Hull" or "Winston Churchill."

Kilgallen

I view her not as a new and distant phenomenon, but as a face familiar figure who has become a distant phenomenon. You know the way you would feel if a girl who lived down the block had three or four beaux suddenly turned up on the local movie house screen as one of the all time glamor girls of all time, in an atmosphere strongly suggestive of incense, and the beat-beat-beat of the Hollywood publicity drum toms.

The first time I ever saw Gene was watching George Abbott direct a scene from a play called Mrs. O'Brien Entertains," and she was going through a scene with four or five other actors.

The second time I saw her she was sitting at a corner table with Twinsitts at 21, surrounded by George Jean Nathan and Richard Watts, jr. She had rather bright brown hair and lovely peachbloom skin, and seemed alert and pleasant. No one ever spoke of her in hushed tones or said, "Look, there she goes!" They were doing that for Brenda Frazier, that year.

That season, Gene couldn't hold a candle to Brenda Frazier.

Then she played an ingenue in "The Male Animal." She wore a sweater and bobby socks, and she got a nice set of reviews, as I recall, although any resemblance between her and Eleanora Duse was purely coincidental.

And then she went to Hollywood.

The incense started burning. You knew she was going to discard the flat-heels-and-cardigan type as soon as they started photographing her upside down, you know the way they so, with hair streaming in a beautiful ripple and whatever she has on slipping off the left shoulder. One thing about Hollywood, they not only know sex appeal when they see it out there, but they know what to do with it.

Well, the answer is that Gene Tierney is now in every picture coming out of the Hollywood factories, or so it seems. The other night I felt like seeing a movie and I picked up the paper to read the advertisements, and there was nothing playing anywhere in the neighborhood but Gene Tierney pictures. And where she wasn't playing—where Gary Cooper or Garbo or Joan Bennett was playing—the ad said: "Coming Fri. and Sat.—Gene Tierney."

That is why I think her case history is so fascinating. Consider the elements: She came from Broadway, where she had played a couple of minor roles. She appeared in the pictures "The Return of Frank James," "Hudson Bay," "Belle Starr," "Sundown" and "The Shanghai Gesture," which—with the possible exception of "Sundown"—is as good a list as you could compile of the worst pictures of the year.

If Judith Anderson or Ethel Barrymore or Katharine Cornell or any other actress of recognized high talent appeared in that many bad pictures in one year, her movie career would be finished.

But Gene's is just beginning.

TALK SPECAIL OHIO SESSION

Liberalization of Jobless Compensation Act Up To Legislature.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Liberalization of unemployment compensation and other social security benefits as proposed by President Roosevelt may necessitate a special session of Ohio's general assembly.

Officials in the state bureau of unemployment compensation said today that if the federal government set jobless benefit standards higher than Ohio's, the legislature would have to make the present compensation act conform. Otherwise, Ohio could not continue to share money paid into the unemployment insurance fund by Buckeye employers, they added.

Revision of the unemployment insurance system in line with a recommendation of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, BUC officials asserted, would knock out a merit rating program under which Ohio employers are expected to pay about $40,000,000 into the insurance fund this year.

Employers now are taxed a percentage of their pay roll for unemployment insurance, according to the stability of employment in their business. Merit rating is intended to encourage steady employment. Last year's contributions totaled $75,000,000 from a 3 per cent tax on payrolls of 57,000 employers of some 2,000,000 workers. Employes do not contribute.

Secretary Morgenthau suggested a 5 per cent social security tax for both employers and employes. A 5 per cent unemployment tax would cost Ohio employers an estimated $125,000,000 yearly. An increase in employe social security payments from 1 to 5 per cent would total another $125,000,000, or a combined total of about 10 per cent of Ohio's taxable payrolls.

FAIRS TO GO ON

Farm Director Cites Need of Maintaining Morale.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State fair and the 92 county and independent fairs will be held as usual this year, despite the war, Agricultural Director John T. Brown asserted today.

"To accomplish the important work that lies before us it is necessary to maintain the morale and interest of agriculture," he remarked.

RESIDENT DIES AT LOUDONVILLE

B. F. Humphrey Succumbs at Home of Daughter.

LOUDONVILLE — A life-long resident of Loudonville, B. F. Humphrey, 84, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Kettering, here early today after a long illness.

Surviving besides the daughter are a sister, Miss Della Humphrey of Mansfield and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. at the T. B. Gilbert funeral home and at 2:30 p. m. at the Loudonville Baptist church. Rev. E. C. Pickering, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Loudonville.

OPEN SEAT SALE

Following the plan set up at the start of this season, the Community Players will open the reserved seat board for their second play, "George Washington Slept Here," on the mezzanine of the Mansfield-Leland hotel at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. On Friday, the seat board will be moved to the Tawse pharmacy, Harvey Bailey, business manager of the Players, said.

NAMES COMMITTEE FOR ANNUAL 'MARCH OF DIMES' CAMPAIGN

Members of the Richland county "Fight Infantile Paralysis" drive committee were named today by Mrs. Louise M. Reese, drive chairman, as the annual fund campaign opened in an effort to raise $1,500 in the county.

Part of the nation-wide "March of Dimes" the county campaign will see coin boxes posted in restaurants, filling stations and stores as well as solicitation from school children, members of women's clubs, post office workers and theater patrons.

Members of the fund campaign for this year are Frank E. Robinson, Lester Redding, Henry G. Brunner, honorary drive chairman, R. B. Gardner, Mary K. Necomer, John Correll, Sylvia Frankel, Ralph Hughes, Earl Gaar, Gratton Johnson, H. E. Homberger, Marshall C. Moore, and George H. Blecker.

Mrs. Reese said today that her committee had not formulated final plans for the coin box distribution but that the pupil solicitation in Mansfield would be under the supervision of Hi-Y clubs in the 11 Mansfield schools. Boys working in the drive will be directed by Correll.

Date for this collection has been set for Jan. 26 in line with a state-wide proclamation by Gov. John W. Bricker.

Women's clubs members will make their contribution by means of "birthday cards" honoring the birthday of President Roosevelt. They will mail cards prepared with coin slots to the committee. This part of the campaign is directed by Miss Newcomer.

Postmaster Homberger will head the drive among postoffice employes.

Half of the $1,500—$300 more than collected last year—will be forwarded to national anti-infantile paralysis headquarters in New York for research use.

The other half of the funds will remain in the county for the purchase of braces, special shoes and wheel chairs for those afflicted and the distribution of literature.

THIEVES BUSY

Enter Three Business Places But Get Only $3.80.

Mansfield police today were investigating the burglary of three North Mulberry street business places late yesterday and the attempted buglary of a fourth.

Although they broke windows at the rear of four business places, thieves were able to gain entry to only three of the shops and got only $3.80 for their trouble.

C. L. Kafer told police that the thieves took $3.50 from his flower shop, 41 North Mulberry street. The other 30 cents was taken from the shop of the National Cash Register company at 39 North Mulberry street.

Thieves also entered the office of the General Finance Loan company at 43 North Mulberry street but officials reported nothing stolen. A window was broken at the rear of the West Universal Cleaning company shop at 37 North Mulberry.

OLD MINE RE-OPENS

SHAWNEE — (NS) — The old Whip-Poor-Will mine near Shawnee, closed for 20 years, was reopened for operations and the first carload of coal in two decades shipped. The Shawnee Coal Co., the operator, said the mine would be completely mechanized. With 200 acres of unmined coal, the workings formerly had a daily capacity of 500 tons and employed 1,000 men.

Laff-a-Day

"Don't mind mama, that's how she got my sister married off!"

J. P. ADAMS DIES

Virginia Native Came To City Year and Half Ago.

John Paul Adams, 61, died Sunday afternoon at Richland county Tuberculosis Sanatorium following an illness of several weeks. He had come to Mansfield a year and a half ago from Wythville, Va., where he was born.

He had attended the Salvation Army school for the blind during his residence here.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Raphael Humphrey, 92 East Fourth street, with whom he made his home and three sons, Louis and Cecil, privates in the U. S. army stationed at Fort Mead, Md., and Stanley of Pulaski, Va.; three sisters, Mrs. Emma Shinault, of Pulaski, Va., Mrs. Laura Taylor and Mrs. Pearl Taylor, both of Max Meadows, Va.; and one brother, Fred, of Pulaski, Va.

The body is at Jones Memorial where funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p. m. by Maj. Paul Hoffman of the Salvation Army. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

Morgenthau Saves Youth From Being AWOL From Camp

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Pvt. James E. Hughes, Rochester, N. Y., thinks Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., is "a very nice gentleman" and a "good plain American."

That was his verdict today after Morgenthau had helped him out of a "spot" and given him a "lift" from New York to Washington in a special coast guard plane.

Before Morgenthau came to his rescue, Hughes had had visions of being A. W. O. L. from his camp in a southern state. The plane trip with Morgenthau brought him here in time to get back to camp before his leave expired.

Hughes and Pvt. Joseph McCarl, also of Rochester, flew to New York yesterday from Rochester where they spent a 13-day furlough. Arriving at La Guardia Field, Hughes found that there had been a mistake about reservations and that there was no seat for him on a Washington-bound commercial plane. McCarl's reservation was all right, however.

After McCarl left, Hughes was lamenting his fate when he saw a coast guard plane preparing to take off. He talked to the pilot, Lieut. W. E. Sinton, who spoke to Morgenthau.

CHAPTER VI

A lamp had been left burning, and by its dim light Linda found her way to the guest room where Sally lay sleeping peacefully. But beside her, Linda turned and tossed until the first rays of the sun touched the room. Each time she closed her eyes it was to see again a vision of Greg Hollister smiling down at her—that intimate, fleeting smile; to hear again his low, caressing voice.

"Perhaps," she whispered half-hopefully, half-fearfully, "I'll have forgotten all this by morning . . ." But inwardly Linda knew she had known no moonlight infatuation. There had been something compelling in Greg's manner. Something that had made her forget completely her sweetheart in Prairievale. Even now, Kyle seemed a shadowy figure in her dim past, and only Greg was vital, important. Only Greg mattered. "So Diane's premonition was right," Linda told herself. "I am a new person. I've just begun to live!"

When morning came, Linda still moved in a happy glow, thrilled by the remembrance of Greg Hollister's warm eyes and his voice.

She was scarcely aware that Diane and Sally were discussing the previous evening's activities as they dressed, until Diane said:

"I saw you leave the reception quite early with Greg Hollister. Where did you go?"

Linda was reluctant to share the secret of her new-found happiness until she had possessed it a little longer. "Oh, just around," she said. "We danced at several places." She did not mention the fact that Greg had driven up the Lakeshore drive and parked where Linda might watch moonlight rippling over Lake Michigan, and they had sat for two hours—talking.

Greg had told her a little about his work as chemical engineer for a large rubber company, and Linda had confessed her engagement to Kyle.

"I should have known I couldn't find someone like you unattached," Greg had declared ruefully.

Sally shattered Linda's reverie. "Hey, snap out of it! Diane insists on taking us to breakfast downtown, and we're waiting on you."

Linda stared ruefully at her reflection in the mirror. The familiar black hat looked almost comic now, atop her new hairdo and Diane, seeing and understanding the reason for her distress, brought forth a tiny hat covered with soft, colorful velvet ribbons.

"Wear this," she commanded, adjusting it at the prescribed angle despite Linda's protest. "You can wear it this morning and return it before you leave for home. That," she said truthfully, "would be unappreciated in Prairievale, even though it is a Paris model."

The morning passed almost too quickly. Breakfast consisted mainly of coffee and a review of the previous evening's activities, and then there was a frantic dash back to the apartment.

"Twenty minutes until train time," Sally wailed. "We'll never make it!" Yet scarcely ten minutes later they were out of the apartment in a cab, with Diane breathless from haste.

"And to think I've scarcely seen you," she complained as the cab careened around curves and through crowded areas en route to the station.

Standing on a bottom step before the train pulled out of the station, Linda turned to her hostess. How can I ever thank you enough for all you've done for me?"

"I had nothing to do with your success," Diane retorted spiritedly. "Whenever you tire sufficiently of Prairievale, come and visit me."

"Tire—of Prairievale?"

Diane nodded wisely. "You will, Linda. You were never meant to bury yourself in that smug little town; but be sure, when you do want to break away, that is isn't too late."

When the train began moving and Diane was gone, Linda stood digesting the other girl's words. What did Diane mean — "make sure it isn't too late."

The return trip was uneventful. Linda was so absorbed in her blissful dream that time passed rapidly. If Sally was aware of any difference in the manner of her companion, she gave no sign.

Dusk was falling and lights from scattered farm houses flickered bravely as the train rushed on. Then, with a sigh, Sally tossed her book aside and announced:

"Ten miles more and we're home. Now are you sorry you went with me?"

"Oh, no!" Linda was radiant. "I had a wonderful time."

"And now you're back to settle down in Prairievale, and tomorrow is Monday and that means pounding a typewriter again." Sally spoke with emphasis, her bright eyes on the other girl. If she expected some outward sign of discontent or rebellion on Linda's part, she was disappointed.

"It was a lovely wedding, wasn't it?" Linda murmured wistfully.

"Ideal. Ted Cummings (Betty's husband) was very nice."

"Yes." Linda stared through the window with unseeing eyes, remembering each detail of the solemn ceremony. Suddenly she leaned forward, her pretty face intent.

"Sally, when you first met Hugh, how did you feel?"

Sally had sensed that something was troubling Linda. Now she knew.

"Like kicking, biting and scratching," she answered cheerfully. "We were rivals in everything we did. Sworn enemies to death."

"Neither was Hugh—satisfactory, I mean," remarked her companion. "You know, I met him when I was home from school for the summer, and on our first date I gave him a terrific walloping at tennis. It went on like that for weeks." She grinned. "Sometimes I think we've never gotten beyond the battling stage."

"Yes, we are happy," Sally agreed soberly. "I never knew life could contain as much happiness for me. Hugh is the sweetest, most generous man in the world."

"But why shouldn't he be?" demanded Linda. "He has an excellent position. His father is wealthy and so is yours. You've never had to skimp and save and struggle to get by. That makes a difference, you know. It's less wearing on the disposition."

"I don't think I could feel any differently toward Hugh," Sally answered gravely, "if he hadn't a penny to his name."

Linda frowned. This wasn't what she had wanted the other girl to say, although she knew Sally's conviction was a natural. But had she (Linda) honestly ever felt that way? Was she so much in love with Kyle that nothing else mattered?

"I—don't know," she murmured wistfully. "Naturally I love Kyle—and I want to be his wife. But being poor, and—and having to do without the things I've always wanted, takes away the — the thrill."

She paused for breath. After scrutinizing her carefully, Sally uttered the words that Linda had been trying to avoid in her own thoughts. Words that made the girl move uneasily and remain silent and moody until they had reached their destination.

"You wouldn't," Sally asked simply and shrewdly, "be trying to convince yourself?"

The sight of Kyle, standing patiently on the station platform, made Linda shiver a little. He looked so—she groped for words—so placid, stolid, as though welcoming her back was commonplace. For no apparent reason, Linda remembered her farewell to Greg Hollister, and scolded herself for being unfair to Kyle Norman.

Sally, preceding her off the train, was caught in a bear-hug by her husband, and kissed so violently that her hat tumbled to the ground. This caused the conductor no end of amusement, but the sight wrenched Linda's heart. Why, she wondered desperately, must she continually compare Kyle with other men and find him lacking in the qualities she most admired?

"Hello, Linda," Kyle had reached her now and Linda shrank back slightly. If Kyle should attempt to kiss her—but no, he was picking up her bag, his manner completely businesslike.

"I suppose you had a good time?"

"Oh, yes. Wonderful."

"That's nice."

How ordinary this is, Linda thought, how polite we are! Kyle isn't really interested in hearnig about my trip, and I don't want to tell him.

She heard her name called and paused, as Hugh Barnes, on the run, caught up with them.

"Since this is rather an occasion," he began, "I thought maybe we four could celebrate by having dinner together, out at our place. After all, Kyle and I want to hear about your little spree, don't we, old man?"

Linda's eyes sparkled. She turned to Kyle, her face glowing expectantly. "I think that would be grand." She caught Kyle's hand. "Shall we, dear?"

Kyle glanced at Hugh Barnes. Almost rudely he said, "Thanks, Mr. Barnes, but I think Linda's mother has dinner waiting."

There was a moment of silence while Linda stared at Hugh pleadingly. Kyle's tone had been almost insulting, and now he was climbing into the car, starting the motor without further ado.

Hugh Barnes saw the sparkle die in Linda's eyes. In the raw November wind she shivered a little. "I—I'm very sorry, too, Hugh, but I can't keep mother in suspense, I guess. But before we go, I want you to know how wonderful Sally was to me. I—I'm so terribly happy that I went to Chicago. I'll never forget it."

Sally, seeing the effort it took for Linda to hold back tears, said airily, "Skip the bouquets, darling. It was fun to be with you." She pressed Linda's hand. "We'll get together soon—the four of us. Okay?"

"Okay," Linda replied.

"It—it wasn't very polite of you," she said mildly to Kyle as the small car sped away from the station, "to be so brusque with Hugh when he was being kind and good-natured. After all, they are my friends—"

"Friends!" Kyle muttered angrily. "They're not our sort, Linda. Just a couple of big-wigs trying to patronize the little girl from the other side of the tracks."

Linda felt a surge of anger. What right had Kyle to criticize her friends—to condemn her as being unfit to mingle with society? She opened her mouth to protest furiously, and then held back the bitter words. What good would it do to quarrel—now?

Kyle was humming under his breath. Linda's head ached, and she was aware now that the magic week-end was over. Once more living was commonplace and drab. Even Sally and Hugh might have been only characters in an exciting novel; their gay, happy mode of life merely her own dream.

She was suddenly conscious that Kyle's humdrum monologue had broken off, and he was staring at her.

"Sa-ay," he exclaimed. "What's that thing you've got on your head?"

Linda's last, shining air castle tumbled in ruins. Swiftly her hand went up to snatch Diane's gay, be-ribboned offender from her hair. So Diane had been right, after all, in saying the little hat would be unappreciated in Prairievale.

"It's just a very silly little hat that belongs to Diane," she explained wearily. "I'll send it back, tomorrow."

Former Comrade Of 'Billy the Kid' Dies at 85

ROSWELL, N. M.—(INS)—The West lost its last link with one of the most stirring chapters in pioneer history recently in the death of George W. Coe, comrade of "Billy the Kid" and sole survivor of the bloody Lincoln county cattle war.

The veteran rancher died at Roswell at the age of 85 following an attack of pneumonia. He had been ill about a week.

Coe, a member of the powerful McSween faction during the Lincoln county war (1876-1878) sided with "Billy the Kid" (William H. Bonney) and was associated with the notorious outlaw during many of his daring escapades.

After the "Kid" was shot to death by Sheriff Pat Garrett to bring the war to a close, Coe laid down his arms at the request of Territorial Governor Lew Wallace, famed author of "Ben Hur," and had lived in peace at his Glencoe, N. M., home ever since.

He is survived by two children, 20 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

FLY, VIA AIR EXPRESS

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(U.P.)—Officials of the San Diego zoo claim the distinction of owning the only "flying" penguins known to man. Penguins, of course, are flightless birds, but the four in the local zoo flew across the country via air express.

THEATERS

Theatrical Story.

Dealing with the hundreds of youngsters who each year invade Broadway looking for a "break" on the stage, "Babes On Broadway," the current Ohio attraction, stars Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in a melange of singing and dancing sprinkled with impersonations ranging from Harry Lauder to Carmen Miranda. Mickey does Carmen Miranda, in a number coached by the Brazilian "bombshell" herself while Judy impersonates Blanche Ring and Fay Templeton, two headliners of yesteryear. Fay Bainter and Virginia Weidler are in the cast while Alexander Woollcott appears in the prologue.

Sprightly Comedy.

Rolling up one ludicrous situation after the other, "Skylark," co-starring Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland and Brian Aherne, continues its merry way at the Madison. The picture presents Miss Colbert as a modern wife who does a little "skylarking" with a handsome bachelor while her husband is occupied with big business. Milland plays the husband and Aherne, the bachelor. Binnie Barnes and Walter Abel are in the cast. The heroic story of a police officer who tries to abolish crime by showing youthful leaders there is a place for them in good society is set forth in "Mob Town," the second picture with Dick Foran.

Romantic Thriller.

"Honky-Tonk," the Clark Gable-Lana Turner romantic thriller cast. "Texas," with Glen Ford, Trevor and Frank Morgan in the supporting cast. "The Deadly Game," with Charles Farrell and June Lang is the second attraction.

Convention Farce.

The hectic goings-on at a convention hotel are pictured in "Three Girls About Town," the Park attraction featuring Joan Blondell, Binnie Barnes and Janet Blair. Robert Benchley plays a bewildered hotel manager and John Howard, a reporter bent on getting the chief hostess fired so she will have to marry him. Eric Blore and Una O'Conner are also cast. "Texas," with Glen Ford, William Holden and Claire Trevor, shares the bill.

Dietrich Picture.

WORRY CEASES

Watchman Reserves Casket and Purchases Burial Lot.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— George Scriver, 79-year-old watchman, was free of a worry which had long plagued him because he has an important piece of ground which he had been unable to obtain before.

Scriver received $889.91 from his employer for back wages, which were found due him under the fair labor standards act. Upon receiving his check, Scriver reserved a casket and purchased a burial lot in a cemetery. "Now," he said, "I don't have to worry. This has been on my mind for a long time, and I just couldn't seem to get enough ahead to take care of it."

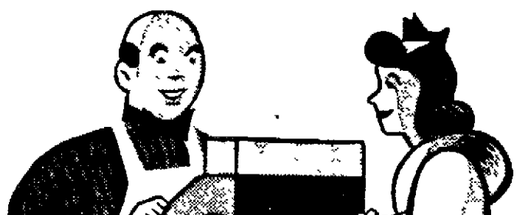
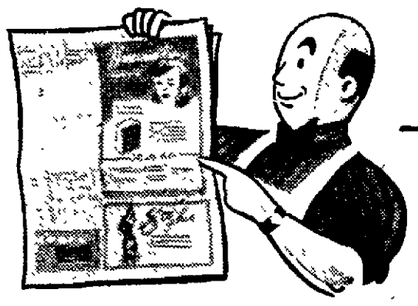
"What's in it for ME?"

"When a manufacturer plans an advertising campaign the main thing I'm interested in is: What's in it for ME? And I have some definite ideas about the kind of advertising that does me the most good."

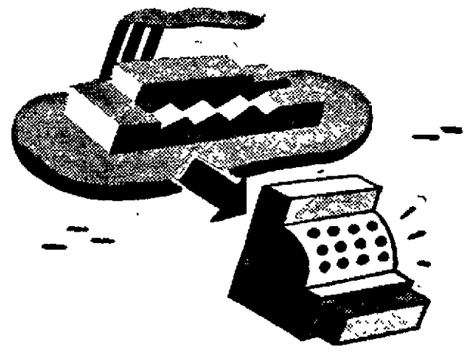


1. "Here's how I see it: I've been running this cash register long enough to understand pretty well how advertising works ...and how newspaper advertising by the manufacturer brings in customers and rings up sales for me."

2. "From what my customers tell me, just about everybody reads the daily paper. More than that, they look for the ads in the paper and shop from them. The results I get from my own newspaper ads make me feel pretty sure of this, too."



3. "Besides, when manufacturers advertise in the local papers, they can run my name and my address in their ads. That's the kind of support that really counts...because it tells the people in this town that they can buy the advertised goods at my store."



4. "It all adds up to more business for manufacturers and for me when they reach all my prospects through advertising in the local newspapers. And what they do here they can do in every other town where they have or want distribution."

Small wonder this retailer is successful: he knows what's in it for him when newspaper advertising goes to work in his town. He knows that manufacturers produce more sales for their retailers...and themselves...when they advertise in local newspapers.

GEN. JOHNSON: Draft Price Ceilings On Used Tires

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Some days ago this column asked in a faint inquiring voice about what is going to happen to the rubber plantations of Malaya and the Indies if the Japs extend their push.

The tin mines can be put out of commission for a few months. The oil wells can be rendered useless, it is said, for a year. If the Japs have modern drilling and finishing equipment, I doubt if the wells can be put out for so long.

Gen. Johnson.

But rubber is different. It takes six years for the trees to bear — at least for the present methods of manufacture. The area under threat or attack produces more than 95 per cent of all the crude rubber in the world.

My point was that if the Japs prevail and these plantations are not destroyed, they and the Nazis will have have all the rubber there is.

The column conjectured that in view of the fact that these properties are controlled by very rich and powerful British, Dutch and American private interests their destruction may be successfully opposed by our own friends and allies. My conclusion from all this is that we should be exerting every effort regardless of cost to replace Malayan rubber by the products of our own ingenuity and that we were not doing that.

Since then there have been several discussions in the press about how awful it would be to deprive the whole world of rubber for years to gain a temporary war advantage, and a rather cavalier dismissal of any suggested substitute by saying "It can't be done."

Taking the first point first: suppose the Japs do occupy these areas and we have not destroyed the rubber. Suppose then we recapture them (as we are assured that we shall) what are the repeating Japs going to do about those trees?

Will they feel our squeamishness about not destroying them in the ground that it would deprive the innocent world of rubber for a number of years? Horsefeathers!

If those plantations are lost to our enemies intact and then again threatened by us, they will be lost to the world alike whether we do the destroying or they do it.

We are talking about one of the greatest stakes at hazard in this war. Sooner or later we have got to have rubber and we normally use 65 per cent of it. If the Japs do get those plantations unimpaired, they must find an outlet. We are the only such market there is. Yet circumstances can hardly be imagined in which we would begin "trading with the enemy," no matter how dire our need may become.

It is hard to approach the problem from any angle without arriving at a conclusion that we must find, among our many promising scientific products, some substitute for rubber. The rubber restrictions thus far imposed will go far to upset our economy, but, in a long war, they would not begin to solve this problem.

It is not enough to say: "It can't be done." During the World war there was a universal slogan: "It can't be done, but here it is." It would be good to revive that now.

Rubber production was moved from its native place, Brazil, for one reason only. It was that, like the production of flax, it requires a very large amount of hand labor. Nowhere in America was there such a supply of coolie labor—efficient labor—working for a few cents a day such as exists on the other half of the globe.

If there is any capitalist objection to moving the production of rubber back again to the Americas, it will be on this score. It may not be so advanced in words but that will be the real resaon.

This is no fly-by-night question to be dismissed with a word. It involves a principal reason for our getting into the war all over the world. The rapid trend of events have recently brought it luridly into the foreground. The situation is acute and there is no time for thumb-twiddling.

Let us know, and know now, what is going to be done about the rubber trees.

SEE EXCISE TAX AS SUBSTITUTE FOR SALES LEVY

Congress Leaders Continue Work on $7,000,000,000 Taxation Program.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A strong move developed in congress today to substitute a general manufacturers' excise tax for a sales levy with low cost food and clothing exempted, as work continued on the $7,000,000,000 war tax bill.

While legislative tax writers still dissatisfied with treasury recommendations to date, leaders were agreed that eventually the major proposals probably will be accepted in one form or another.

These would include a withholding tax levied on the nation's payroll—a method of collecting income taxes at the source—lowered income tax exemptions to bring in millions of new direct taxpayers, and a general increase all along the line in existing levies.

While the ultimate effect on the paying public of a general manufacturers' excise tax and a sales tax would be much the same—except that the former is a so-called "hidden" levy which usually results in a price rise and the latter is a direct tax—many congressmen favored imposing the tax at the source.

"A manufacturers' excise tax is easier to administer, since collection is made at the source and the public doesn't have to add a penny or so to all small purchases," Rep. Disney (D.), Okla., a member of the ways and means committee, explained.

Disney also advocated exempting low cost food and clothing from such a levy, but said he believed it should be imposed on luxury foods and expensive clothing.

The treasury, it was reported, has failed to recommend either a sales tax or a general excise levy, although it does advocate broadening of existing excise taxes and increasing of rates.

On the whole congressmen feel, however, that some such tax will be necessary before the requested $7,000,000,000 can be raised.

Further conferences between leaders and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau are scheduled for later in the week, from which it is hoped that details can be worked out.

In addition to the $7,000,000,000 in general revenue, President Roosevelt in his budget message also asked for $2,000,000,000 more in social security taxes.

TALK SPECAIL OHIO SESSION

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Liberalization of unemployment compensation and other social security benefits as proposed by President Roosevelt may necessitate a special session of Ohio's general assembly.

Officials in the state bureau of unemployment compensation said today that if the federal government set jobless benefit standards higher than Ohio's, the legislature would have to make the present compensation act conform. Otherwise, Ohio could not continue to share money paid into the unemployment insurance fund by Buckeye employers, they added.

Revision of the unemployment insurance system in line with a recommendation of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, BUC officials asserted, would knock out a merit rating program under which Ohio employers are expected to pay about $40,000,000 into the insurance fund this year.

Employers now are taxed a percentage of their pay roll for unemployment insurance, according to the stability of employment in their business. Merit rating is intended to encourage steady employment. Last year's contributions totaled $75,000,000 from a 3 per cent tax on payrolls of 57,000 employers of some 2,000,000 workers. Employes do not contribute.

Secretary Morgenthau suggested a 5 per cent social security tax for both employers and employes. A 5 per cent unemployment tax would cost Ohio employers an estimated $125,000,000 yearly. An increase in employe social security payments from 1 to 5 per cent would total another $125,000,000, or a combined total of about 10 per cent of Ohio's taxable payrolls.

NAMES COMMITTEE FOR ANNUAL 'MARCH OF DIMES' CAMPAIGN

Members of the Richland county "Fight Infantile Paralysis" drive committee were named today by Mrs. Louise M. Reese, drive chairman, as the annual fund campaign opened in an effort to raise $1,500 in the county.

Part of the nation-wide "March of Dimes" the county campaign will see coin boxes posted in restaurants, filling stations and stores as well as solicitation from school children, members of women's clubs, post office workers and theater patrons.

Members of the fund campaign for this year are Frank E. Robinson, Lester Redding, Henry G. Brunner, honorary drive chairman, R. B. Gardner; Mary K. Necomer, John Correll, Sylvia Frankel, Ralph Hughes, Earl Gaar, Gratton Johnson, H. E. Homberger, Marshall C. Moore, and George H. Blecker.

Mrs. Reese said today that her committee had not formulated final plans for the coin box distribution but that the pupil solicitation in Mansfield would be under the supervision of Hi-Y clubs in the 11 Mansfield schools. Boys working in the drive will be directed by Correll.

Date for this collection has been set for Jan. 26 in line with a state-wide proclamation by Gov. John W. Bricker.

Women's clubs members will make their contribution by means of "birthday cards" honoring the birthday of President Roosevelt. They will mail cards prepared with coin slots to the committee. This part of the campaign is directed by Miss Newcomer.

Postmaster Homberger will head the drive among postoffice employes.

Half of the $1,500—$300 more than collected last year—will be forwarded to national anti-infantile paralysis headquarters in New York for research use.

The other half of the funds will remain in the county for the purchase of braces, special shoes and wheel chairs for those afflicted and the distribution of literature.

THIEVES BUSY

Enter Three Business Places But Get Only $3.80.

Mansfield police today were investigating the burglary of three North Mulberry street business places late yesterday and the attempted buglary of a fourth.

Although they broke windows at the rear of four business places, thieves were able to gain entry to only three of the shops and got only $3.80 for their trouble.

C. L. Kafer told police that the thieves took $3.50 from his flower shop, 41 North Mulberry street. The other 30 cents was taken from the shop of the National Cash Register company at 39 North Mulberry street.

Thieves also entered the office of the General Finance Loan company at 43 North Mulberry street but officials reported nothing stolen. A window was broken at the rear of the West Universal Cleaning company shop at 37 North Mulberry.

OLD MINE RE-OPENS

SHAWNEE — (INS) — The old Whip-Poor-Will mine near Shawnee, closed for 20 years, was reopened for operations and the first carload of coal in two decades shipped. The Shawnee Coal Co., the operator, said the mine would be completely mechanized. With 200 acres of unmined coal, the workings formerly had a daily capacity of 500 tons and employed 1,000 men.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

I think one of the most interesting phases of modern life, aside from current history and world affairs, is Gene Tierney. The first astonishing thing about her is that a writer like myself can sit down "Gene Tierney" and not further identification and believe that you know who she is probably, indeed, have a very good mental picture of her) just as if I had said "Cordell Hull" or "Winston Churchill."

Kilgallen.

I view her not as a new and distant phenomenon, but as a face familiar figure who has become a distant phenomenon. You know the way you would feel if a girl who lived down the block had three or four beaux suddenly turned up on the local movie house screen as one of the time glamor girls of all time, an atmosphere strongly suggestive of incense, and the beat-beat-beat of the Hollywood publicity drum toms.

The first time I ever saw Gene was watching George Abbott direct a scene from a play called Mrs. O'Brien Entertains," and she was going through a scene with four or five other actors.

The second time I saw her-she was sitting at a corner table downstairs at 21, surrounded by George Jean Nathan and Richard Watts, jr. She had rather bright brown hair and lovely peachbloom skin, and seemed alert and pleasant. No one ever spoke of her in hushed tones or said, "Look, there she goes!" They were doing that season, Brenda Frazier, that year. That season, Gene couldn't hold a candle to Brenda Frazier.

Then she played an ingenue in "The Male Animal." She wore a sweater and bobby socks, and she got a nice set of reviews, as I recall, although any resemblance between her and Eleanora Duse was purely coincidental.

And then she went to Hollywood.

The incense started burning. You knew she was going to discard the flat-heels-and-cardigan type as soon as they started photographing her upside down, you know the way they so, with hair streaming in a beautiful ripple and whatever she has on slipping off the left shoulder. One thing about Hollywood, they not only know sex appeal when they see it out there, but they know what to do with it.

Well, the answer is that Gene Tierney is now in every picture coming out of the Hollywood factories, or so it seems. The other night I felt like seeing a movie and I picked up the paper to read the advertisements, and there was nothing playing anywhere in the neighborhood but Gene Tierney pictures. And where she wasn't playing—where Gary Cooper or Garbo or Joan Bennett was playing—the ad said: "Coming Fri. and Sat.—Gene Tierney."

That is why I think her case history is so fascinating. Consider the elements: She came from Broadway, where she had played a couple of minor roles. She appeared in the pictures "The Return of Frank James," "Hudson Bay," "Belle Starr," "Sundown" and "The Shanghai Gesture," which—with the possible exception of "Sundown"—is as good a list as you could compile of the worst pictures of the year.

If Judith Anderson or Ethel Barrymore or Katharine Cornell or any other actress of recognized high talent appeared in that many bad pictures in one year, her movie career would be finished.

But Gene's is just beginning.

RESIDENT DIES AT LOUDONVILLE

B. F. Humphrey Succumbs at Home of Daughter.

LOUDONVILLE — A life-long resident of Loudonville, B. F. Humphrey, 84, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Kettering, here early today after a long illness.

Surviving besides the daughter are a sister, Miss Della Humphrey of Mansfield and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. at the T. B. Gilbert funeral home and at 2:30 p. m. at the Loudonville Baptist church. Rev. E. C. Pickering, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Loudonville.

OPEN SEAT SALE

Following the plan set up at the start of this season, the Community Players will open the reserved seat board for their second play, "George Washington Slept Here," on the mezzanine of the Mansfield-Leland hotel at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. On Friday, the seat board will be moved to the Tawse pharmacy, Harvey Bailey, business manager of the Players, said.

"George Washington Slept Here" will be given at John Simpson auditorium on Jan. 20.

FAIRS TO GO ON

Farm Director Cites Need of Maintaining Morale.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State fair and the 92 county and independent fairs will be held as usual this year, despite the war, Agricultural Director John T. Brown asserted today.

"To accomplish the important work that lies before us it is necessary to maintain the morale and interest of agriculture," he remarked.

Applying for dates for the annual expositions, fair managers from all parts of the state indicated the stress on farm production in wartime would contribute to the success of this year's fairs.

Laff-a-Day

"Don't mind mama, that's how she got my sister married off!"

C. R. Fichter, 559 Heineman boulevard, is a mighty proud new grandfather and he wants to keep the record straight. A report received in Mansfield and carried in The News-Journal Saturday announced the birth of a son to Fichter's daughter, Martha, and her husband, George Bender, of Philadelphia, Pa. Fichter is pleased about the announcement but he wants it made clear that the new grandchild is not a son. Instead, he says, she's a daughter and the swellest little glamor girl ever born in Philadelphia.

Members of the newly-organized John Todd park association plan to bring winter sports right into the home. Arrangements are being made to have motion pictures taken of children skating, sliding and skiing at the new park site. The movies will be shown at the regular meetings of several Mansfield organizations in th park association's campaign to raise funds for improvement of the park.

Mansfield police will count noses in the future before making hunts for prowlers. Police were called out three times early yesterday morning to investigate reports of prowlers. Two of the calls came from the vicinity of Lida street and Vale avenue. No prowler was found in either case. A third call came from near Harker and Grant streets. Patrolmen from a police cruiser crept up on the "suspect" and apprehended him, only to find a brother policeman, investigating a fourth prowler report.

Members of the new January term county petit jury braved the snow this morning to go to the courthouse for their first session which lasted less than 30 minutes. All the jurors had to do was sign a verdict to make the settlement of a case official. The action contested the will of the late Mrs. Ella Glasgow. Principals in the case agreed before the jury session to let the will stand and the jurors added their approval. There is no other business on the Jury's calendar until Thursday morning.

J. P. ADAMS DIES

Virginia Native Came To City Year and Half Ago.

John Paul Adams, 61, died Sunday afternoon at Richland county Tuberculosis Sanatorium following an illness of several weeks. He had come to Mansfield a year and a half ago from Wythville, Va., where he was born.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Raphael Humphrey, 92 East Fourth street, with whom he made his home and three sons, Louis and Cecil, privates in the U. S. army stationed at Fort Mead, Md., and Stanley of Pulaski, Va.; three sisters, Mrs. Emma Shinault, of Pulaski, Va., Mrs. Laura Taylor and Mrs. Pearl Taylor, both of Max Meadows, Va.; and one brother, Fred, of Pulaski, Va.

The body is at Jones Memorial where funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p. m. by Maj. Paul Hoffman of the Salvation Army. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

OPA SETS UP MAXIMUMS ON ALL RETREADS

Henderson Says Action Will Protect Public From Exploitation.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Leon Henderson worked today on a price ceiling for used auto tires, after setting a maximum price schedule for "retreadable" and retreated or recapped tires.

Henderson declared that with the ban on sale of new tires, profiteering of "serious proportions" has developed in the sale of used tires and said that the price ceiling will be fixed in the near future to protect the public from "exploitation."

Meanwhile, members of the house small business committee today planned to seek remedies for the nation's 44,000 automobile dealers and their half-million employes as a seven-man industry-labor board was named to convert the auto industry to full wartime production.

Culminating a dispute between management and labor representatives of the industry over the makeup of the auto committee, which is purely advisory, the OPM appointed Cyrus Ching, vice president of the U. S. Rubber company, as chairman of the group.

In addition to Ching, the committee consists of three members representing management and three labor members.

Selection of Ching as head of the group was viewed as a victory for management over labor's demands for equal authority in directing conversion of the vast automobile industry.

The schedule announced by Henderson for old tire carcasses worth retreading, and retreads for passenger cars, trucks, buses, agricultural implements, industrial machines, motorcycles and other vehicles of common use, will go into effect next Monday.

The maximum prices allowed for the 6:00x16 passenger car tires—the most commonly used—are $1.50 for old tire carcasses, $7.50 for the best retread job and $9 for a retread tire. The ceiling for the next best job is $6.45 and $7.95 for a retread. Prices vary for the other sizes.

Sales of new tires for civilian use was stopped by the OPA Dec. 11. When the regular ceiling is established, maximum prices will prevail on sales of tires at every stage of condition and use.

Henderson said that the government "cannot permit price to determine who can afford and who cannot afford to buy second-hand tires in this time of war."

Morgenthau Saves Youth From Being AWOL From Camp

That was his verdict today after Morgenthau had helped him out of a "spot" and given him a "lift" from New York to Washington in a special coast guard plane.

Before Morgenthau came to his rescue, Hughes had had visions of being A. W. O. L. from his camp in a southern state. The plane trip with Morgenthau brought him here in time to get back to camp before his leave expired.

Hughes and Pvt. Joseph McCarl, also of Rochester, flew to New York yesterday from Rochester where they spent a 13-day furlough. Arriving at La Guardia Field, Hughes found that there had been a mistake about reservations and that there was no seat for him on a Washington-bound commercial plane. McCarl's reservation was all right, however.

After McCarl left, Hughes was lamenting his fate when he saw a coast guard plane preparing to take off. He talked to the pilot, Lieut. W. E. Sinton, who spoke to Morgenthau.

RITES TUESDAY

Body of Former Resident Brought To Loudonville for Burial.

LOUDONVILLE—Funeral services for John Bettorf, former resident of Loudonville, who died in Spokane, Wash., Thursday, will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the T. B. Gilbert funeral home. Rev. J. H. Kuhlman, pastor of Zion Lutheran church, will officiate. Burial will be in Loudonville.

Survivors include two sisters, Mrs. Alva Young and Mrs. James Young, both of Loudonville, and two brothers, George of Ashland, and Charles of Akron.

"I haven't gotten my sanction yet," said Harry the Moanin' Mehock.

"That," I told him, "doesn't surprise me a bit. Why should you have a sanction?"

"No, no," he cuts in, "what I mean is I haven't yet gotten the sanction from the National Interscholastic Athletic association for this year's running of the Mansfield Relays."

What? Those relays popping up again so soon? It was just yesterday or the day before that we were drumming up the 1941 meet. Time flies, in relays.

"We've got to get the sanction before these out-of-state schools can compete," explained Mehock, "but that kindly little word of approval should be coming in any day now. The application's been in this long time."

And the out-of-state schools already are showing interest in this year's event, according to Mehock. Last year Parkersburg was the only West Virginia school entered. Parkersburg, Charleston and Huntington have indicated they'll be here this year.

Maybe we should tell the scanty-clads:

"Stay indoors, boys, the weather's bad."

But maybe that would be giving information to the enemy. So no weather reports today.

Here's a tip for enemy bombers, however: Stay away from Washington. The Manager is there now. That's Manager Johnny Burns, the Mansfield maestro of basketball, softball and other ball clubs.

A letter received today from the Manager says he completed his training at Fort Eustis, and has been transferred to the Capital with the coastal anti-aircraft artillery.

"We are in complete control of the defenses of the Capital," says John. "Our status is much the same as the King's Guard in England."

Well, now, I wouldn't be surprised at that. For if Johnny can shoot anti-aircraft guns like he can shoot golf on rainy Sundays, he'd be a very handy man to have around a Capital.

And wouldn't you just know they'd put John in an anti-aircraft battery? He always did aim high while managing his Mansfield sport teams.

Whittaker Stays At Bowling Green

BOWLING GREEN—(AP)—Robert Whittaker signed today to continue indefinitely as football coach at Bowling Green state university.

Whittaker, frequently mentioned as a possible candidate for the Miami university coaching vacancy, also will take over the position of track coach here and teach several summer classes.

He informed Dr. Frank J. Prout, Bowling Green president, "I'll stay here as long as you stay." Whittaker was coach at Sandusky high school when Prout was superintendent of schools.

* * *

"I don't feel that I've been here long enough to move," added Whittaker, who took the Bowling Green position a year ago and developed a team which claimed a share of the mythical Ohio conference football title.

Cooper Leads L. A. Golf Open

Pressure on 'Lighthorse Harry' In Final Rounds.

By ROBERT MYERS

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—It was Harry Cooper against the field today in the final round of the $10,000 Los Angeles open and the last crack at the biggest purse on California's winter tournament trail.

The hurry-up veteran of 39 went into the finale with a two stroke lead over his brother pros, who were inclined to believe that he wouldn't have it when the curtain came down tonight.

Cooper had rounds of 69-71-70—210 for the par 72 of Hillcrest Country club's tree lined, well trapped course. He bolstered his position yesterday after starting out on even terms with the tournament favorite, Benny Hogan, America's top money winning pro and low scorer in 1941.

Hogan shot a creditable 72 to go with his previous 70-70 for a 54 hole score of 212.

Cooper's fellow professionals were definitely not pulling against him. But off the record, as far as their names were concerned, they feared the pressure and last round jitters would get him.

The pressure undoubtedly was on "Lighthorse Harry" but he captured this tournament in 1926 and repeated his triumph in 1937. He might hang on to the finish.

Hogan, who had an official average of 70.28 strokes in 1941, showed no trace of cracking up under the strain despite his 72.

Lurking behind, and a threat to both Cooper and Hogan, were two men just three blows out of first place. They were Slammin' Sam Snead, who shared the pre-tournament honor spot with Hogan, and long hitting Jimmy Thomson, of Del Monte, who won the tournament five years ago.

Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., looked like the biggest threat. He hadn't had a hot round, but coasted into a 213 total behind rounds of 70-71-72. And still very much in contention was Horton Smith, the first round leader, with a 72 yesterday for 214.

* * *

Ex-national open champion Byron Nelson handed in a 70 for 216, and Poplar Denny Shute and Jimmy Demaret went into today's play at 217. Many picked Shute to get in closer to the top. Two other former national open champs, Lawson Little and Ralph Guldahl, lagged behind, Little with 222 and Guldahl with 226. The 1941 L. A. winner, Johnny Bulla, had 225.

Christoforidis Set For Cincinnati Bout

Christoforidis—who came to America from Greece in 1940 after an impressive ring record in Europe—sees in tonight's bout a chance to move closer to another crack at Gus Lesnevich to whom he lost the NBA light heavyweight crown.

* * *

He predicts a kayo of "Ebony Ez," but local ring smarties foresee an even fight and favor Charles if the Cincinnati youngster gets past the first two rounds.

TEXAS AGGIES EAT 1100 APPLES ON TRIP

COLLEGE STATION, Tex.—(INS)—If there's anything to this talk about an apple a day keeping the doctor away, Texas A. & M. won't have to worry about football injuries in the Cotton Bowl against Alabama.

En route back from Tacoma, where they beat Washington State 7-0, the Aggie squad ate eleven hundred (1100) specimens of the state's most famous fruit—eleven entire boxes, each containing 100 apples. Even over a 2700-mile trip, that's a lot of apples.

BUSINESS UP

Crosley Reports Increase of 76 Per Cent in Volume in 1941.

CINCINNATI — (INS) — Dollar volume of business of the Crosley Corporation increased 76 per cent in 1941 over the preceding year, vice president R. C. Cosgrove announced.

"The actual declaration of war found Crosley well launched on an extensive program of national defense production for nearly all of the branches of the service," Cosgrove stated. "Since the first of last year, we have been gearing our production, in steadily increasing volume, to the needs of the federal government, so that our entry into the war merely meant a quickening of the tempo of our defense production, needed for all-out war. Our national defense work is now in excess of $10,000,000."

BABE RUTH READY FOR HOSPITAL'S RELEASE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Babe Ruth spent the weekend in the hospital although earlier plans were to release the former Yankee home run hitter last Friday.

His wife, however, says the Babe is "getting along nicely." He was taken to the hospital Jan. 9 for treatment of a nervous condition resulting largely from an auto accident in which he escaped injury.

Set To Par Big 10 Lead

Unbeaten Purdue, Iowa Drive For 4th Victories.

By VINCENT BURKE

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Best bets for paring down the four-way tie for leadership of the current Big Ten basketball race appear in the Purdue-Indiana and Minnesota-Iowa games on tonight's schedule.

Unbeaten Purdue and Iowa each will be after its fourth win. High-scoring Otto Graham should be Northwestern's insurance to remain on top in the face of an invasion by cellar-division Michigan. Illinois, the fourth unbeaten conference member, meets another cellar team at Ohio State.

With most conference teams already through three games on the 15-game schedule, Northwestern's high-geared offensive machine has piled up the most impressive record. Sparked by Graham, who leads Big Ten scorers with 58 points, the Wildcats have averaged 56 points in three games.

Wisconsin's defending champions, beaten in three conference starts, will try to change its luck with a win here tonight over its Chicago cellar mate. The Badgers lost a four-point decision to Iowa Saturday. Forward Johnny Kotz, who scored 26 points in the Iowa game is the heaviest of the Badger offensive guns.

Purdue pits an unbeaten record against Indiana, traditional intra-state rival. The Hoosiers, always dangerous when they are opposing Purdue, have won one and lost two.

Unbeaten Iowa may run into a tartar against Minnesota

Minnesota probably will be without the service of Don Carlson, forward who was fifth in last season's scoring, as he was to be inducted into the army today. Center Don Mattson led Minnesota with 13 points in the impressive 63 to 43 win over Indiana Saturday.

Grid Game Rougher Now

Old Timer Says Runners Have Less Protection Now.

By ROBERT MYERS

PHOENIX, Ariz.—(AP)—Harking back over nearly 50 years of college football, the gentleman from Lehigh university observed that if old timers thought the game was rough, they ought to play it today.

Surprised at that? So were several of Rulemaker Walter Okeson's listeners, who always associated the so-called good old days with the flying wedge and massed offense, shin guards, handlebar mustaches and a hospital.

"It was a hard game in those days," said the astute Okeson, present chairman and a member for 20 years of the National Collegiate Football Rules committee, in session here. The group expects to conclude the meeting tonight.

"But in those days," he continued, "the man carrying the ball seldom ran more than two yards before he made contact with the oposing team. He had no blockers—his teammates were all behind him, pushing.

"Today a ball carrier may get up full steam, and usually does, before making contact. He gets hit in the open far more than before. He has men clearing the path in front of him, and that contact comes at full speed."

The rules committee chairman said it was amazing that critical injuries and fatalities these days are negligible compared with yesterday's casualties. He attributed this to light, improved equipment and better developed athletes, trained in body co-ordination.

* * *

There was not a single college football fatality last season.

"I think, looking back over the years, that we have succeeded in building a fine sport," Okeson concluded.

CANCEL RACES

NEW YORK—(AP)—The American Motorcycle association has cancelled all national championship races scheduled for 1942 in order to cooperate in the conservation of fuel, tires and other war materials.

Tygers Meet Ashland Club

Full Slate of Cage Tilts Booked This Week.

Renewal of a traditional rivalry heads this week's program for cage fans of Mansfield and vicinity.

Tomorrow night the Mansfield Tygers invade Ashland on what appears to be a tough assignment. In recent years it's become the custom for Mansfield and Ashland to win their home games. And Ashland has a good team this season, one that suffered its first defeat only last Friday night at Mt. Vernon.

City "A" league hoopsters also swing into action tomorrow night at the high school gym after a week's rest. Two league tilts are scheduled with Westinghouse meeting the Athletic Supplies, and Yuncker Sports tangling with City News. Blue Goose Sohioans will appear in an exhibition game.

The high school team returns to the home court Friday night for a game with New Philadelphia, while Friday will also find county teams rolling into their usual week-end league program. Butler plays at Madison in a battle to determine first place in the circuit. Lucas goes to Ontario, Plymouth to Shiloh and Union to Bellville.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—A lot of silly things have been said about the war and sports (and this may be one of them) but we can't see the necessity of cancelling the golf championship . . . We can't think of anything that would have much less effect on the war effort than a women's golf tournament—unless it's the court tennis championships that already have been called off. . . . As long as the golfers are going to have competion, why not let them have a national title to aim at, even though it wouldn't mean as much as usual? . . .

Sponsored by senior class of the school to pay tribute to the high school football and cafe teams, the banquet was attended by more than 150 persons. Members of the athletic teams, coaches, class members, the faculty and the Shelby district board of education were guests.

Other speakers on the program included Supt. C. G. Keck of the Shelby schools, Principal O. H Schaaf, Coach William Query, Assistant Coaches Raymond Hatch, Arlo Willet and David Randall, and Raymon Zeiters, the president of the host class, who served as toastmaster.

Find Kicking Most Dangerous Play

CHICAGO—(AP)—Waiting for the annual meeting of the National Interscholastic Football committee which opened today was a report on the number and nature of grid injuries suffered by high school players during the 1941 season.

* * *

Last year the figures indicated the most dangerous play was the one involving a kick, and the least dangerous the one involving a forward pass.

DIMAG IN DEMAND

Joe DiMaggio has so many invitations to attend luncheons and dinners that he said "it looks like I'll never have time to eat at home." He indicated he would have to abandon his residence in New York to get an "evening with the family."

PREP STAR WANTED

JUDGE WANTS TEAM

Say, This Ball Is Flat

OREGON STATE GIVES BIG AS LIFE AWARDS

CORVALLIS, Ore.—(AP)—Oregon State is right proud of that victory in its first Rose Bowl game. And the school is going to let its football players know it.

They're passing out gold plated football trophies Friday night, and in keeping with the magnitude of the event, the keepsakes will be life sized replicas of footballs instead of the customary vest pocket trinkets.

Louis Takes Army Exams

Boxer Set For Physical Tests Before Induction.

By PAUL SCHEFFELS

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Joseph Louis Barrow, formerly of the Alabama cotton fields and now of Madison Square Garden and points west, writes a chapter in ring annals today when he becomes the first world heavyweight champion to enter this country's armed forces while still holding the title.

Louis puts his million-dollar body under army stethescopes at 9 a. m. for a physical examination, preliminary to induction. When the physicians finish pounding and testing the 200-odd pounds of muscular might that built up a $2,263,784.38 fortune in 56 fights, he will be handed a ticket for the 11:30 a. m. Wednesday train to Camp Upton, Long Island.

There, Louis will undergo the final induction details such as innoculations, issuance of uniforms and equipment, and assignment to a training base with the impartiality accorded any other recruit.

Army officials refused to discuss where Louis would be stationed for his six weeks of compulsory training and where he would be sent for the duration. There was little doubt, however, that he would go eventually into the army's morale division.

Col. H. Clay M. Supplee, morale officer of the second corps area, intimated that there should be few obstacles in the way of future Louis fights because army relief organizations need money as much as any other branch of the services.

Louis remained practically emotionless under a torrent of congratulatory telegrams following his enlistment. He said he had no preference for any branch of the service.

"I hardly think I'll become a boxing instructor," he said. "You see, I'm still taking lessons—from my trainer, Jack Blackburn. I just hope that I can do as well for Uncle Sam as I did for Uncle Mike Jacobs."

Jacobs said Louis' future fistic activities—in the ring, at least—were uncertain. Joe was getting ready for a March battle with Melio Bettina or Gus Lesnevich and a return match with Billy Conn had been reported, but that was before Louis, pugilist, became Louis, buck private.

Ordered to report today to his draft board in Chicago for induction, Louis—reclassified into 1-A when abandoned divorce proceedings revealed that his wife was self-supporting—made several voluntary re-adjustments with the same prodigality that prompted him to donate his entire share of his fight with Buddy Baer to the naval relief society.

Entitled to four more weeks of private life and the right to appeal induction, Joe went to draft board No. 20 here and volunteered to enter the army immediately.

JOINS MARINES

Lawrence C. Lawson, Willard, R. D. 2, former captain of the Willard high school basketball team, today joined the United States marine corps and left immediately for Parris Island, S. C., it was announced by Captain T. A. Tighe, officer in charge of the Cleveland recruiting district.

Son of Mrs. Grace Lawson of near Willard, Lawson has been employed as a florist since graduation from high school in 1935.

Rockets Play 10 Tilts Away

Eight Unbeaten Ohio Clubs Set To Mess Up Records.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Toledo's scintillating Rockets, winners of 10 straight games on their home floor, get a chance to show how tough they are on foreign hardwoods this week.

Coach Harold Anderson's club meets Marshall at Huntington, W. Va., tonight, and the Thundering Herd, which blasted Dayton's unsullied record Saturday night, is expected to be a worthy foe. Tuesday night the Rockets tangle with Cincinnati's Bearcats in the Queen City. The Bearcats have bowed only to Georgetown and Wooster in seven starts.

Saturday night the Rockets entertain Marshall at Toledo—the three engagements of the state-wide leaders featuring the week's 42-game schedule.

Mount Union, conference and state champs, downed three opponents last week to take over second place in the state-wide drive, and go into a first-place tie with Ohio Northern and Baldwin-Wallace in the league. The Mounts have two conference games booked this week.

The eight-team "clean" section in the conference is due for revision this week as Wittenberg meets Ohio Northern, and Otterbein tangles with Capital and Wooster, all of those clubs being unbeaten in league play. De Sales ran its string to three victories without loss by defeating Assumption 52-41 Sunday.

Wednesday: Capital at Otterbein, Oberlin at Denison, Baldwin-Wallace at John Carroll, Miami at Ohio Wesleyan, Heidelberg at Hiram, Kenyon at Bluffton, W. & J. at Muskingum.

Friday: Muskingum at Bowling Green, Findlay at Marietta, Ashland at Baldwin Wallace, Mount Union at John Carroll, Cedarville at Wilberforce.

HANK GREENBERG TO BE GIVEN BASEBALL AWARD

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Hank Greenberg, former Detroit outfielder now in the army, will be presented with a plaque for "extraordinary service to baseball" by the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America at their annual dinner on Feb. 1, it was announced today.

The award was prompted by Greenberg's announcement that he was returning to the service for the duration of the war.

'Circus Party' Keeps Children Happy Indoors

The children themselves can do much of the preparation. Making paper hats, assembling costumes from the old-clothes closet and working up "acts" will keep them busy and happy for hours.

And when small throats are dry, bottled soft drinks supply the perfect answer. They help maintain the circus atmosphere and are easy to serve.

You can add to the gayety of the occasion by supplying play money and letting the older youngsters "vend" the eatables and drinkables to the others.

Popular with children, bottled carbonated beverages are just the thing for any small-fry party. These sparkling drinks contain sugar that supplies quick energy in a wholesome form. The carbonation promotes good digestion, diet authorities say, and tends to stimulate the appetite for other foods.

Pink Lemonade.

3 oranges, juice
1½ cups cherry juice
1 qt. gingerale or lemon carbonated beverage
½ cup sugar (or to taste)

Blend the fruit juices and sugar, stirring well. Add the carbonated beverage just before serving in a big pitcher, with ice. This makes a pink, foamy drink that the youngsters love. Serves 10.

Warn Drivers: Anti-Freeze Is Limited

Defense demands will limit the civilian supply of anti-freeze solution for motorists this winter, but common caution and conservation should prevent motors from freezing up

This was the consensus of Cleveland anti-freeze suppliers today as cold weather approached.

One jobber said that from 15 to 20 per cent of the Cleveland motoring public faced the possibility of going without anti-freeze. He said motorists who do not have anti-freeze should be careful to drain water from their automobile radiators on cold nights.

One anti-freeze product advanced from $1 to $1.50 a gallon, but the price of two others remained at last year's levels Denatured alcohol which sold at 35 cents a gallon last year is up to 89 cents

ORDINANCE NO. 12

An ordinance providing for the issuance of notes by the Village of South Boulevards Ohio in anticipation of the issuance of bonds for the purpose of the construction of sanitary sewers and a treatment plant in the Sewer District No. 1 of South Boulevards Ohio, and declaring the necessity of the issuance of bonds for such purpose.

Whereas, at an election held on the 7th day of November, 1939, on the proposition of issuing bonds of the Village of South Boulevards Ohio for the purpose hereinafter stated in the sum of Twenty-seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($27,500.00), Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20,000 00) of which will be raised by special assessment bonds and Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500 00) of which shall be raised by general obligation bonds, and of a levy of taxes outside of the ten mill limitation to pay the interest and principal of such bonds, at least sixty-five per centum of those voting upon the proposition voted in favor thereof, and this council now proposes to proceed with the issuance of said bonds, and

Whereas, this council has requested the Village Clerk to issue his certificate as to the estimated life of the improvement to construct sanitary sewers and a treatment plant to be constructed from the proceeds of the bonds hereinafter referred to and of the notes to be issued in anticipation of said bonds and as to the maximum maturity of such bonds and notes and the Village Clerk has certified to this council such estimated life as exceeding five years and has further certified the maximum maturity of such bonds as twenty (20) years and such notes as one (1) year, from Oct. 1st, 1941

Now, Therefore, Be It Ordained by the Council of the Village of South Boulevards, Ohio.

Sec. 1. That it is deemed necessary to issue bonds of the Village of South Boulevards Ohio, in the principal sum of Twenty-seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($27,500.00) for the purpose of paying the property owners portion to-wit Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20 000 00), and the Village portion to-wit Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500.00) of the cost and expense of construction of a complete sanitary sewerage system including a treatment plant in the Sanitary Sewer District No. 1 and adjoining property purchased for said treatment plant.

Sec. 2. That said bonds of the Village of South Boulevards shall be issued in the principal sum of Twenty-seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($27,500 00) for the purpose aforesaid Said bonds shall bear interest at the rate of not exceeding Four Percentum (4%) per annum payable semi-annually until the principal sums are paid and shall mature in twenty (20) annual installments after their issuance.

Sec. 3 That it is necessary and this council hereby determines that notes shall be issued in anticipation of the issuance of said bonds

Sec. 4 That such anticipatory notes in the amount of Twenty-seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($27,500 00) which sum does not exceed the amount of the bond issue, shall be issued bearing interest at the rate of not exceeding Four Percentum (4%) per annum payable at maturity. Such notes shall be dated the day of issuance and shall mature on approximately the First day of October, 1942. Such notes shall be executed and delivered in such number and such denominations as may be requested by the purchaser of such notes

Sec 5. Such notes shall be executed by the Mayor and the Village Clerk and bear the seal of the corporation and shall be designated Sewerage System Notes and shall be payable at the office of the Farmers Savings & Trust Co Bank in Mansfield, Ohio that they shall express on their face the purpose for which they are issued and that they are issued pursuant to the ordinance

Sec 6 Said notes shall be first offered to the officer having charge of the bond retirement fund of the village and so many of the same as shall not be taken by the said officer shall be sold at private sale by the village clerk but not for less than ... and accrued interest and the proceeds from such sale, except any premium and accrued interest thereon, and the amount thereof necessary for the payment of interest prior to the maturity of said notes shall be paid into the proper fund and used for the purpose aforesaid and for no other purpose. Any premium and accrued interest and the amount necessary for the payment of interest prior to their maturity shall be transferred to the bond retirement fund to be applied in the payment of principal and interest of said notes in the manner provided by law.

Sec. 7. All assessments collected for the improvements aforesaid and unexpended balances remaining in the funds after the costs and expenses of said improvements have been paid, shall be applied to the payment of said notes and the interest thereon until both are fully provided for.

Sec. 8. Said notes shall be the full general obligations of the village and the full faith, credit and revenue of said village are hereby pledged for the prompt payment of the same. The par value to be received from the sale of said bonds anticipated by said notes and any excess fund resulting from the issuance of said notes shall, to the extent necessary, be used only for the retirement of said notes at maturity together with interest thereon and is hereby pledged for such purpose.

Sec. 9. During the year or years while such notes run, there shall be levied on all taxable property in the Village of South Boulevards, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually not less than that which would have been levied if the bonds had been issued without the prior issue of such notes Said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified, levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers, in the same manner and at the same time that taxes for general purposes for each of said years are certified, extended and collected. Said taxes shall be placed before and in preference to all other items and for the full amount thereof. The funds derived from said tax levies hereby required shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which together with the interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the principal and interest of said notes or the bonds in anticipation of which they are issued when and as the same fall due

Sec. 10. The village clerk is hereby directed to forward a certified copy of this ordinance to the County Auditor.

Sec. 11. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

Passed: Jan. 6., 1942.

R. K CLARK, Mayor.

Sleepy Village Near Shell-Loading Plant Becomes Bustling City.

NEWTON FALLS —(INS)— The transformation of Newton Falls from a more or less sleepy village into a small bustling city, by reason of the location of the world's largest shell-loading plant next door, has created a difficult traffic problem which necessitated a meeting of the council to put some definite regulations into effect.

The council requested two additional traffic lights, ordered warning signs to protect pedestrians, set a time limit for automobiles on the streets, and banned parking on the main street.

MIXED PRICES RULE DEALINGS ON STOCK MART

Civilian Users of Steel Told They Have Little Chance at Metal.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Slightly mixed prices were the rule in today's early stock market transactions.

Studied by analysts in their search for market trend indicators was the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that "until the situation becomes clearer and actual war demands are understood, civilian users have little chance of obtaining steel."

The review added that inability to get sufficient raw material, principally scrap, was cutting into total output possibilities but that this handicap was affecting private consumers rather than armament requirements.

CASE SHIFTED

Huston Orders Penalty Suit Into Federal Court.

Acting at the request of county and state AAA officials, Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston today ordered a suit involving the legality of the federal wheat transferred from the county court to the U. S. district court in northern Ohio.

The action was filed early in December by a group of Richland county farmers who contend that the tax collected on excess wheat is unconstitutional. Judge Huston recently granted a temporary injunction halting collection of the penalty from plaintiffs in the case.

Defendants in the action included Guy L. Taylor, county AAA chairman; Elmer Kruze, state chairman of the federal farm setup, and members of the county and state committees. The request for transfer of the case to the higher court was filed in their behalf by Francis B. Kavanagh, attorney in U. S. district court.

ILLNESS FATAL TO DAUGHTER, 2

Rites For Catherine Davidson to Be Held Wednesday.

Catherine Aleen Davidson, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Davidson, died this morning at her home, rear 335 Newman street, after a short illness.

Born in Mansfield, April 20, 1940, she is survived by her parents, two brothers, Lewis, jr., and David L., and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daugherty, all of Mansfield.

The body was taken to the Wappner funeral home where services will be held Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. in charge of Rev. James L. Boyer, pastor of the United Brethren church. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

FIGHTING HEAVY ON PHILIPPINE BATTLE FRONT

to the waters off Davao, the southern port in the Philippines which the Japanese have been utilizing as a naval base for their East Indies thrust. The heavy bombers scored a smashing direct hit on an enemy battleship and left it in flames. An anti-aircraft installation ashore also was hit.

Commuting back to secret bases either in the Indies or Australia, the bombers spotted and swooped down on an enemy cruiser and two large transports in the Celebes sea, south of Davao. These were attacked, but the results were undetermined.

Dutch planes, meanwhile, registered two direct hits on large Japanese transports off the northeast coast of Borneo, where the enemy has landed on the little island of Tarakan, a highly important oil center. Ranging farther afield, Dutch submarines were credited with sinking two Japanese transports in the Gulf of Siam.

Units of the U. S. Asiatic fleet were cooperating with Dutch naval forces in invasion countermoves, but the navy department here was silent on the nature and results of their activities.

The communique last night limited itself to a report of a Japanese hit-run attack on the naval station at Tutuila, in American Samoa some 2,200 miles southwest of Hawaii. A small enemy warship pumped 14 shells of light caliber in the direction of the naval station there. No damage and only three slight casualties resulted.

General MacArthur, the war department disclosed, hurled back a fresh attack yesterday by "heavily reinforced Japanese troops." The enemy struck with "tremendous force" at MacArthur's right flank northwest of Manila, but were repulsed with heavy losses by American and Filipino troops holding previously prepared positions. The defenders' casualties were light.

In an official broadcast from Tokyo Japanese imperial headquarters claimed its soldiers on Saturday had completely occupied Olongapo, a U. S. naval base 60 miles northwest of Manila bay on the Bataan peninsula. The announcement failed to elicit any comment from the navy department in Washington.

Japanese bombers returned simultaneously to their attacks on the bristling fortifications guarding the mouth of Manila bay. The bombardment, the first in several days, was not heavy and did no serious damage.

Believe U. S. Still Holds Midway

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The United States today appeared to have won at least the initial round of the battle to keep Midway island out of the hands of the Japanese.

Three weeks ago today was the last time the tiny island was mentioned in official American communiques. The last actual fighting was reported in a navy communique four weeks ago tomorrow. The silence indicated an absence of further Japanese attacks.

Midway, 1,500 miles west of Honolulu and considered by geographers as the easternmost of the Hawaiian islands, is probably garrisoned by the twin of the marine detachment which wrote a new chapter of American gallantry at Wake.

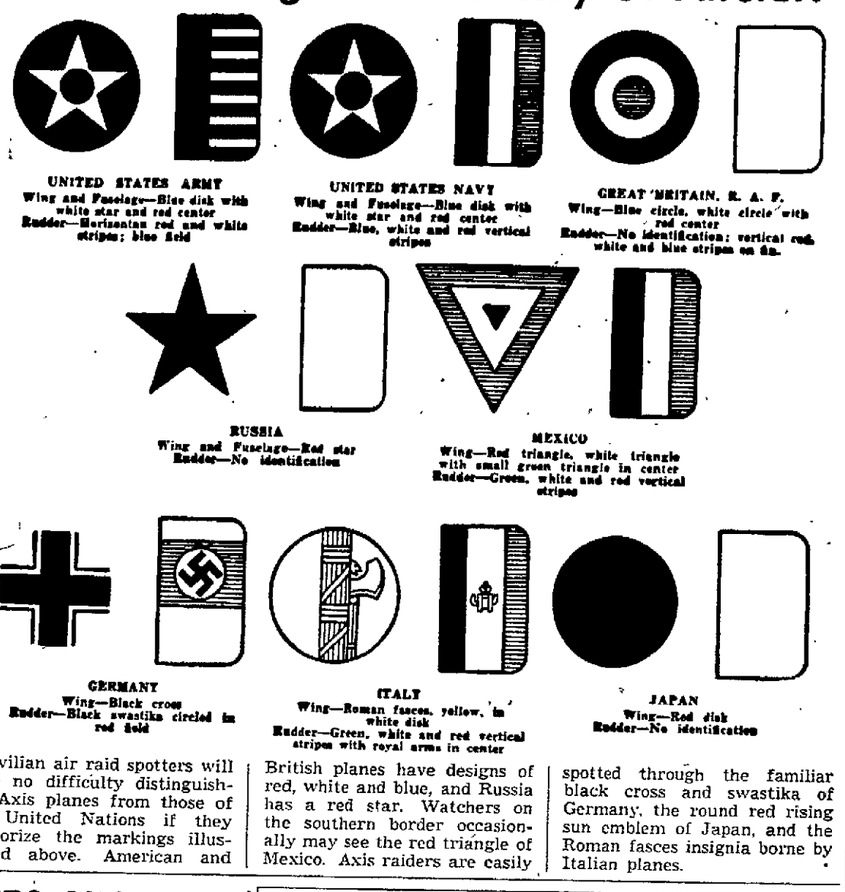
How To Distinguish Nationality Of Aircraft



Civilian air raid spotters will have no difficulty distinguishing Axis planes from those of the United Nations if they memorize the markings illustrated above. American and British planes have designs of red, white and blue, and Russia has a red star. Watchers on the southern border occasionally may see the red triangle of Mexico. Axis raiders are easily spotted through the familiar black cross and swastika of Germany, the round red rising sun emblem of Japan, and the Roman fasces insignia borne by Italian planes.

He pointed out that the American navy, cooperating with British units, is helping to keep supply lines open in the north and south Atlantic and the north and south Pacific because "it is Hitler we must destroy."

"The navy's task is enormous and unprecedented," Knox added. "There is fighting to do, but there are also long coasts to guard, our far flung bases and outposts and the Panama canal to protect. And then there are the endless lines of ships crawling over the waters of the earth—in the north Atlantic, in the south Atlantic, in the north Pacific, in the south Pacific—carrying to us the numberless things we need for life and war and carrying away the numberless things our friends need, everywhere—our friends embattled with the common foe. These supply lines, these myriads of ships crawling to and fro across the face of the earth must also be protected."

Without disclosing details, Knox asserted that American and British naval and air units have virtually succeeded in winning the Atlantic battle against Axis submarines.

"The great highway of the sea between American and British is open!" Knox said. "We must not forget that the most powerful of our enemies has for months been using all the power and ingenuity at his command to cut that highway."

"But, thanks to the navy on the sea and in the air, he has failed to do so—and the British bulwark grows stronger day by day. The full record of the navy in the battle for the Atlantic can not yet be told. To do so would be to give Hitler details of our successful operations he would gladly lose another Bismarck to know."

"We know who our great enemy is," Knox said. "The enemy who, before all others, must be defeated first. It is not Japan, it is not Italy. It is Hitler and Hitler's Nazis, Hitler's Germany. It is Hitler we must destroy. That done, the whole Axis fabric will collapse. The finishing off of Hitler's satellites will be easy by contrast. Japan, like Italy, is just the tool of Hitler."

WOULD HELP ON MARCH 15

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Income taxes exceeding $10 could be paid in ten installments instead of the four now authorized under a bill introduced by Rep. J. Harry McGregor (R-Ohio). The congressman asserted his proposal would "go a long way toward relieving the defense tax burden without impeding the war program."

COLD WEATHER KEEPS TRAFFIC TOLL AT LOW

County Reports Only Three Minor Injuries; Six Killed In State.

Light traffic due to the cold weather and careful driving induced by slippery highways combined to keep the traffic toll down over the week-end in Richland county and the rest of the state.

Three persons received minor injuries in county mishaps and the state's death toll was six, lowest in recent months.

All three persons injured in the county were involved in accidents in Mansfield. Mrs. James Leiter, 87½ West Fifth street, suffered neck injuries Sunday when cars driven by her husband and Dale F. Burnell, Fredericktown, R. D. 2, collided at South Main street and Lexington avenue.

John P. Salisbury, 70, Perrysville, R. D. 1, received a nose fracture when he was knocked down by a car late Saturday at Sixth and Main strets. He was treated at General hospital.

Mrs. Wilson Carroll, 27, of 308 East Second street, suffered cuts on her face and head Saturday night in the collision of an automobile and truck at the Park avenue east subway.

Police investigated a number of mishaps in the city, but they added up to nothing more than dented fenders and damaged bumpers.

At Galion, Carl Davis, Morrow county resident, was held by police on a charge of driving while intoxicated after his car figured in a collision. No one was injured.

Fatalities in the state included:
